Be prepared for the business of healthcare with University of the Sciences

The healthcare market in the U.S. has been growing into a complex industry, where business, policy, and public needs intersect. USciences graduates are prepared to contribute to many areas of the healthcare industry, beyond the professionals in the white coats. Our pharmaceutical and healthcare business students receive a unique educational experience blending coursework in business, science, and the healthcare industry.

Students learn business fundamentals—finance, accounting, management, marketing, economics—in classrooms where pharmaceutical and healthcare business concepts are overlaid and industry-specific examples are used. The specialized curriculum includes courses not available in any other business program. The program's existence within a health science institution means business students learn to work in an interdisciplinary environment. This specialized training produces graduates who are more valuable to employers.

USciences' location in Philadelphia provides easy access to industry internships. Usually paid, these internships provide students with experience in multiple sectors of the industry from internship experiences. Recent internships have occurred at Alliance Consulting, AstraZeneca, Blue Cross Blue Shield, GlaxoSmithKline, IMS Health, National Comprehensive Cancer Network, Publicis, and SAI Consulting.

USciences' pharmaceutical and healthcare business graduates are well-positioned to hit the ground running in a variety of careers, including sales and marketing, healthcare market research, medical communication and advertising, nonprofit healthcare management, clinical trials management, pharmaceutical sales, consulting, and public health.
