Abstract	Part of Philadelphia's Fairmount Park System, Cobb's Creek Park has a rich and diverse history of transformative use. Located in the western and southwestern regions of Philadelphia, Cobb's Creek Park was developed alongside the Cobb's Creek watershed and contains approximately 800 acres of preserved land. Park development along such watersheds is fairly unique to the city of Philadelphia, and is not nearly as common in other urban park systems. While Cobb's Creek is the predominant waterway for the region, the park is also the site of tributaries such as Naylor's Run and Indian Creek. Cobb's Creek Park offers a variety of public recreational attractions. The natural beauty of the park has popularized activities such as hiking and biking, while park recreation centers offer swimming pools, baseball fields, tennis courts, basketball courts, ice skating, roller skating and campgrounds. There are two municipal golf courses available, as well as the Cobb's Creek Community Environmental Education Center designed to educate the public on naturalist pursuits and environmental science. Cobb's Creek Park is also home to the historic Blue Bell Inn, which dates back to the Revolutionary Era. Today, the Fairmount Park Commission, in coalition with a variety of departments within Pennsylvania state government, non-profit organizations, and private donors, is actively working to expand the recreational offerings of Cobb's Creek Park, as well as restore the natural beauty of the region.

Historical Note

The Cobb's Creek Park region was originally inhabited by Native Americans, primarily members of the Lenape tribe, who called the location "Karakung". The land was utilized for its agricultural fertility, as well as the abundance of convenient fishing opportunities resulting from the surrounding tributaries. Around the mid-17th Century, Dutch, Swedish and English Quaker immigrants began settlement in the area, and worked to divert some of the streams to create man made millraces to support mills and plantation-style farms and drained the marshlands to create dry ground for pastures. The nation's first water mill was constructed in Cobb's Creek Park in 1634 by Swedish Governor Printz.

The Blue Bell Inn, located in Cobb's Creek Park and built in 1766, is a site of great historical significance. During the Revolutionary Era, the Blue Bell Inn housed a number of Patriotic Army soldiers, including George Washington. It was also the location of a Revolutionary War battle in 1777, which followed the evacuation of Fort Mifflin. Although established in the mid-19th Century, historic Mount Moriah Cemetery also contains a connection to this time period as Betsy Ross was re-buried here to her permanent resting site. Today, Mount Moriah Cemetery is the largest cemetery in Pennsylvania.

The transformation of this region from dispersed farming plantations and local economic centers into a highly developed urban residential area began with the creation of the Mill Creek sewer system in the late 1800s. The creation of this sewer system increased the amount of habitable land, and subsequently quickly led to significant real estate growth. This was amplified by the creation of the Market-Frankford Elevated Train Line, or "El", in 1908, which provided easy and affordable access to the city, desirable to commuters. The connectivity created by this public transportation helped expand the dense urbanization from central Philadelphia to the outer limits encompassed by Cobb's Creek Park. This growth, combined with issues resulting from years of drainage of raw sewage into Cobb's Creek, negatively impacted the park's natural environment and resources.

Over the past twenty-five years, Cobb's Creek Park has been the center of a number of revitalization projects aimed to restore a healthy, natural environment. In 1991, the Cobb's Creek Community Environmental Education Center was established to help educate the public on the important role the environment has on daily life, as well as inspire volunteerism and community efforts to preserve the park's natural habitats. An integrated watershed management was implemented by the Philadelphia Water Department in 2004 to help restore the natural resources and beneficial uses of Cobb's Creek and surrounding tributaries. The Fairmount Park Commission has also used funding to create miles of biking and hiking trails throughout the park in efforts to enhance beneficial use of this important and vital area.

Scope and Contents Note

This collection contains a variety of maps, plans and drawings relating to Cobb's Creek Park, as well as a very limited number of related correspondence. Materials included in the collection are blueprints, bluelines, linens, mylars and paper. The collection contains diverse types of maps and plans, such as sewer plans, topographic plans, site plans, latitudinal and longitudinal plans, water main plans, street maps, and landscape plans. The collection is particularly strong in items relating to the Cobb's Creek golf courses- both Cobb's Creek Golf Course (Olde) and Karakung Golf Course- as well as Morris Park. Items included in this collection are dated from 1902 to 2003, although the bulk dates are more inclusive at 1920 to 1975. All items included are in English.

Arrangement Note

All items in this collection have been arranged against a geographical grid map XXXX. If certain areas include a high volume of documents, they have been further arranged according to type of material (i.e. Blueprints and Bluelines or Linens and Paper).

If an item expands over two grid plots, preference has been given to the grid plot containing the larger portion covered. If portions seem equitable, preference has been given to the northern region.

If an item's coverage expands to three or more regions it has filed as "Cobb's Creek General". Highly specific subject matter, such as Cobb's Creek Golf Course, has been arranged within each folder so all items relating to the subject matter are in succession for easier retrieval.
