

For Immediate Release:

Yes, there is a coast in Pennsylvania!
Discover Hidden Treasures at the 2002 Pennsylvania Coast Day

Please join us in celebrating Pennsylvania's Coast. Pennsylvania Coast Day, which is expected to attract more than 10,000 people, will be held on Sunday, September 29, 2002 from 11:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. at the historic Fairmount Water Works in Philadelphia below the Philadelphia Art Museum on the Schuylkill River.

This FREE public event will feature quality educational programming, musical "education," family-oriented and hands-on activities by some of our region's most influential artists. People of all ages will enjoy an arts festival, local music legends, refreshments and more!

Free parking and complimentary shuttle service is available at Lemon Hill, across from Boat House Row on Kelly Drive. Guests can also use the Philly Phlash stop behind the Philadelphia Museum of Art (stop #23) for easy access to Coast Day and the arts festival.

Pennsylvania Coast Day 2002 is being hosted by the Philadelphia Water Department, the Partnership for the Delaware Estuary, the Pennsylvania Coastal Zone Management Program, Fairmount Park Commission, and Fairmount Management. This event will be the First Annual Pennsylvania Coast Day, and the theme of this celebration is "Discovering the Treasures of Pennsylvania's Coast and the Delaware Estuary."

For more information about the 2002 Pennsylvania Coast Day, please call the Partnership for the Delaware Estuary at 1-800-445-4935 or log onto www.DelawareEstuary.org.
