Philadelphia is an affordable alternative to New York City and other high-cost East Coast locations, offering the same global and national access. Additionally, top-ranked universities provide a skilled workforce who enjoy Philadelphia’s vibrant downtown, public transit, and inexpensive cost of living. Smart companies choose Philadelphia because it improves their bottom line.

Furthermore, revisions to City tax regulations have enhanced the business climate for investment companies. Activities of certain financial securities have been redefined as “non-business activities”, which exempts them from Business Privilege and Net Profits Taxes. In addition, the City offers a compelling package of incentives for new businesses opening operations in Philadelphia.

Industry leading asset managers, mutual funds, accounting and banking firms have made Philadelphia a center of financial services. Learn more about how Philadelphia is a smart city and a smart choice for your business at www.phila.gov/smartchoice.

“Our firm is proud that Philadelphia has been our home for nearly 180 years, and we’ve recently announced our commitment to remain in the city far into the future. One of the keys to our decision was Philadelphia’s vibrant business, educational and cultural environment. It’s an environment that produces, as well as attracts, the talented financial services professionals who will drive Janney’s growth and success going forward.”
