

The DHS Parenting Collaborative

The DHS Parenting Collaborative is designed to utilize parenting education as the means to reinforce supportive behaviors of parents and caregivers, enhance parenting skills, and to teach alternative approaches to child-rearing. The DHS Parenting Collaborative uses parenting education as a means to prevent child abuse and reduce the need for child protective service intervention. The DHS Parenting Collaborative provides parents and caregivers with access to a variety of educational resources including essential parenting methods, child development information, parent stress management, anger management and conflict resolution skills all from evidence based curriculums. This program is available to all Philadelphia residents.

Referral Process:

Parents, caregivers, concerned individuals and agencies can call or email a request to the Referral Service Coordinator who will provide additional information about the parenting education classes as well as identify and connect the individual to a parenting education program that matches the potential participant's needs. Agencies that contact the Referral Service Coordinator will be emailed a referral form to complete on a participant. If a parent or caregiver calls, the Referral Service Coordinator completes the referral form and makes arrangements to place in an appropriate class.

Classes:

- Information below outlines all classes by location, CUA area, and target population (if specified) served. The last section summarizes classes available to highly specialized populations throughout the city
