The Schuylkill River is in dire need of dredging in order to maintain high standards for national boat races such as sculling and dragon boat competitions, which generate revenue as well as enhance our city's reputation.

I kayak on the Schuylkill and every time it rains heavily I kayak through dead rats, plastic bottles and the smell of sewage. We have wonderful resources in our waterways. Please make every effort to keep out sewage and waste.

Pennsylvania is the second most polluted state in this country. That is an embarrassment to all legislators who have perpetuated practices that jeopardize our health and well-being.

I live near Fairmount Park and often hikes along the Schuylkill/Wissahickon watershed -- its stunning beauty at the edge of the city is one of the reasons I choose to live here. However, I worry about the pollution of this fragile ecosystem.

I support increasing revenue for Philadelphia's green infrastructure programs. By expanding investment in green infrastructure, we can better protect our environment and our local waterways.

Sincerely,

I support increasing revenue for Philadelphia's green infrastructure programs. By expanding investment in green infrastructure, we can better protect our environment and our local waterways. I have been rowing and kayaking on the river for the past 8 years. the rivers are a huge resource that we need to take seriously for the health of our communities. It's plain stupid not to!

Sincerely,

Caroline Carney

Our waterways define Philadelphia. Boating on the Schuylkill. Walking along the Delaware River. Hiking the Wissahickon Gorge. These are the places we explore, bike, boat, and fish.

We've made progress cleaning them up. An innovative program has helped reduce raw sewage overflowing sewers during rainstorms. Green infrastructure has filtered oil, fertilizers and pesticides and litter that runoff roads and sidewalks into the Schuylkill and Delaware.

It's already prevented over 1.5 billions gallons of sewage and runoff from entering our waterways annually. And now Philadelphia wants to double down on this strategy by investing more resources in protecting our waterways.

Philadelphia's solution is both ingenious and commonsense: stopping all this runoff at the source. By creating more urban green spaces, rain gardens and other absorbent surfaces around the city that can soak up this water, we can prevent it from flooding our sewer systems--and then our great rivers and streams--with pollution.

And the city's work over the last five years has made us an international leader according to the Yale School of Environmental Science and Forestry.²

At the same time, this adds more green spaces throughout our neighborhoods, and it's also one of the cheapest ways to solve the runoff problem. Please help protect these critical urban environmental initiatives and ensure that they have the resources they need.

While the city's made huge strides using green methods to reduce pollution from entering our rivers and streams, the programs that make this all possible are at risk without increased funding. City officials have proposed to increase revenue for these projects and others, which would infuse Philadelphia's green infrastructure programs with tens of millions of dollars to help protect our environment and local waterways.

I support increasing revenue for Philadelphia's green infrastructure programs. By expanding investment in green infrastructure, we can better protect our environment and our local waterways. Help protect Philadelphia's streams today.

Sincerely,
