SUMMARY

As the COVID-19 pandemic began to spread rapidly through the United States in early March 2020, cities and states began restricting business activity and enacting social distancing measures in an effort to stop the spread of the virus. As the public health and economic crisis escalated, the City of Philadelphia and PIDC quickly mobilized to establish the Philadelphia COVID-19 Small Business Relief Fund, which was one of the first local relief funds in the nation. The Fund ultimately offered $13.3 million in grants and zero-interest loans to over 2,000 Philadelphia small businesses impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic.

To inform the creation of this Relief Fund, a survey was issued in multiple languages and disseminated through a diverse network of partners to assess the impact COVID-19 was having on businesses in Philadelphia. Within a week, more than 2,000 responses were received from businesses across the city, with the majority of responses from businesses with under $500,000 in annual revenues. With this information, the Department of Commerce and PIDC identified the types and sizes of businesses that were being most heavily impacted, the depth of the impact, and the number of jobs at stake.

The Relief Fund was developed as a tiered program, offering a mix of grants and zero-interest loans for businesses that earned under $5 million in annual revenue. The program was created with the following stated aims:

- Provide relief to small businesses in order to help them survive this crisis.
- Retain as many employees as possible.
- Help businesses avoid predatory lenders.
- Maintain the provision of goods and services for Philadelphia's residents.

SUMMARY

Tiers include:

- Microenterprise Grants — Up to $5,000 per business for businesses with less than $500,000 in annual revenue.
- Small Business Grants — Up to $25,000 per business for businesses with annual revenue between $500,000 and $3 million.
- Small Business Zero-Interest Loan — Up to $100,000 per business for businesses with annual revenue between $3 million and $5 million.

Applications to the Relief Fund were available in English, Spanish, and Mandarin and opened on March 23, just one week after the City restricted all non-essential business activity. Within days, thousands of applications requesting tens of millions of dollars were received. Realizing that demand would greatly outstrip the available resources, the Relief Fund was closed on March 30 to all businesses except those with less than $500,000 in annual revenue. These businesses were given an additional 15 days to submit applications for microenterprise grants. In total, the Relief Fund received more than 7,200 applications requesting over $146 million in relief, from businesses of all types and sizes, located across the city (see pages 3 and 4 for additional details).

Awards were not made on a first-come, first-served basis. Instead, applications were evaluated using scoring criteria that prioritized and weighed a variety of factors including businesses that experienced a high loss of revenue (more than 25 percent), are in highly-impacted industries, and are located in a low- to moderate-income (LMI) or high poverty area (above 25 percent). Additional criteria included having a plan for recovery and a commitment to retaining their employees as long as possible.

Every application was evaluated by reviewers at the Department of Commerce or PIDC. A decision panel of economic development leaders from the Department of Commerce and PIDC made the final decision on application approvals.

The businesses that received awards stretch across Philadelphia, with 57 percent located in low-to-moderate income census tracts and 54 percent located in census tracts with a poverty rate above 25 percent. According to self-reported demographic information, 66 percent of awards went to minority business owners, while 32 percent went to women-owned businesses. Awards were given to businesses from a diverse set of industries including food and hospitality, personal services, retail, childcare, and many more.

The COVID-19 crisis continues to be an enormous challenge for our local neighborhood businesses, but collaboration between local economic development partners has given us the ability to quickly deliver vital resources to small businesses all across Philadelphia.

The COVID-19 Small Business Relief Fund, which awarded a total of $13.3 million dollars, was funded and administered by the Department of Commerce and PIDC, with additional support from: Citizens Bank, The Daniel B. and Florence E. Green Foundation, Knight Foundation, M&T Bank, PNC Foundation, Wells Fargo Foundation, and Truist, formerly BB&T Bank.

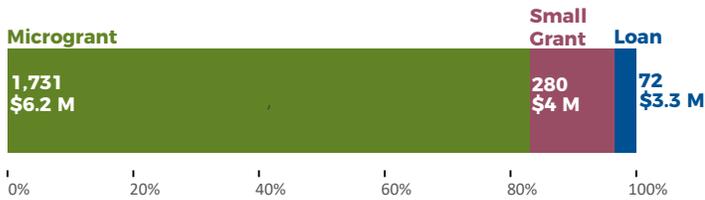

“[The grant] enables me to continue paying my employees. I’ve been able to keep them working almost as many hours as before. It hasn’t covered everything, but the thing that stresses me out is being too far behind.”

ANALYSIS OF GRANTS & LOANS APPROVED

Over $13.3 million from the Relief Fund was awarded to 2,083 businesses representing a diverse array of Philadelphia's population and industry base.

1 - APPROVALS BY TIER

As it became clear that federal and state assistance was being accessed by larger businesses, we intentionally sought to provide assistance to small, neighborhood businesses. Businesses with less than $500,000 in revenue received the majority of awards (83 percent). This aligns with the Relief Fund's goal to serve the City's smallest businesses—many of which have historically had difficulty accessing federal government resources, funding, or other capital.

OF APPROVED BUSINESSES HAVE REVENUES LESS THAN $500,000

A primary aim of the Relief Fund was providing relief to small businesses in order to help them survive the COVID-crisis, particularly those most negatively impacted by government-mandated business closures. Awards were given to businesses from a broad spectrum of industries including food service, personal services, retail, and childcare.

2 - APPROVALS BY INDUSTRY

3 - APPROVALS BY DEMOGRAPHICS

According to self-reported demographic information, 66 percent of awards went to minority business owners and 32 percent went to women-owned businesses.

The Relief Fund served businesses in the City's most distressed and impoverished communities — 57 percent of awardees were located in low-to-moderate income census tracts and 54 percent of businesses were located in areas with poverty rates exceeding the city's average rate of 25 percent. For comparison, 47 percent of Philadelphia's census tracts are low-to-moderate income and 43 percent of census tracts have poverty greater than 25 percent.

4 - APPROVAL PERCENTAGE BY CENSUS TRACT INCOME AND POVERTY RATE

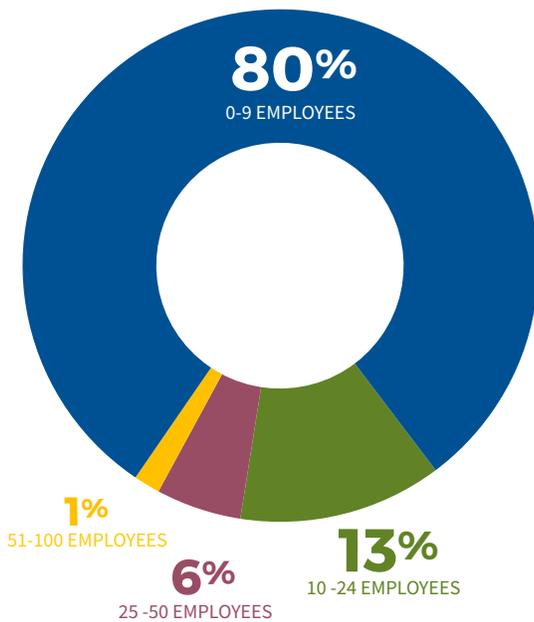

ANALYSIS OF GRANTS & LOANS APPROVED

The preservation of jobs was one key component of the relief effort. The Relief Fund supported businesses that employed over 15,600 people prior to March 1, 2020. The average number of jobs per awardee was 7.5 and 80 percent of businesses approved had fewer than 10 employees prior to March 1, 2020, aligning with the Relief Fund’s goal to serve the City’s smallest businesses.

While the map on page 4 shows the highest concentration of approvals was in Center City, it is worth noting that the approvals that were made in Center City supported a greater number of jobs per awardee. The average jobs per awardee was 12 in Center City zip codes*, where one-third of businesses receiving loans were located, compared to the Relief Fund city wide average of 7.5 jobs per awardee. As the table below shows, in the tiers for larger businesses, where higher grant and loan amounts were made, more jobs were supported per awardee.

ANALYSIS OF APPLICATIONS & PROCESS

The Relief Fund received a total of 7,232 applications from businesses of all types and sizes, located across the city requesting over $146 million in support. Of the total applications, 6,112 were eligible. Businesses were ineligible for an award if they were not located in the City of Philadelphia or were out of compliance with city taxes. Businesses were provided an opportunity to come into compliance on taxes and become eligible. Of the eligible applicants, 2,083 (34 percent) were approved for grants or loans. For businesses that had multiple locations, each location was eligible to apply for funding.

8 - APPROVAL PIPELINE

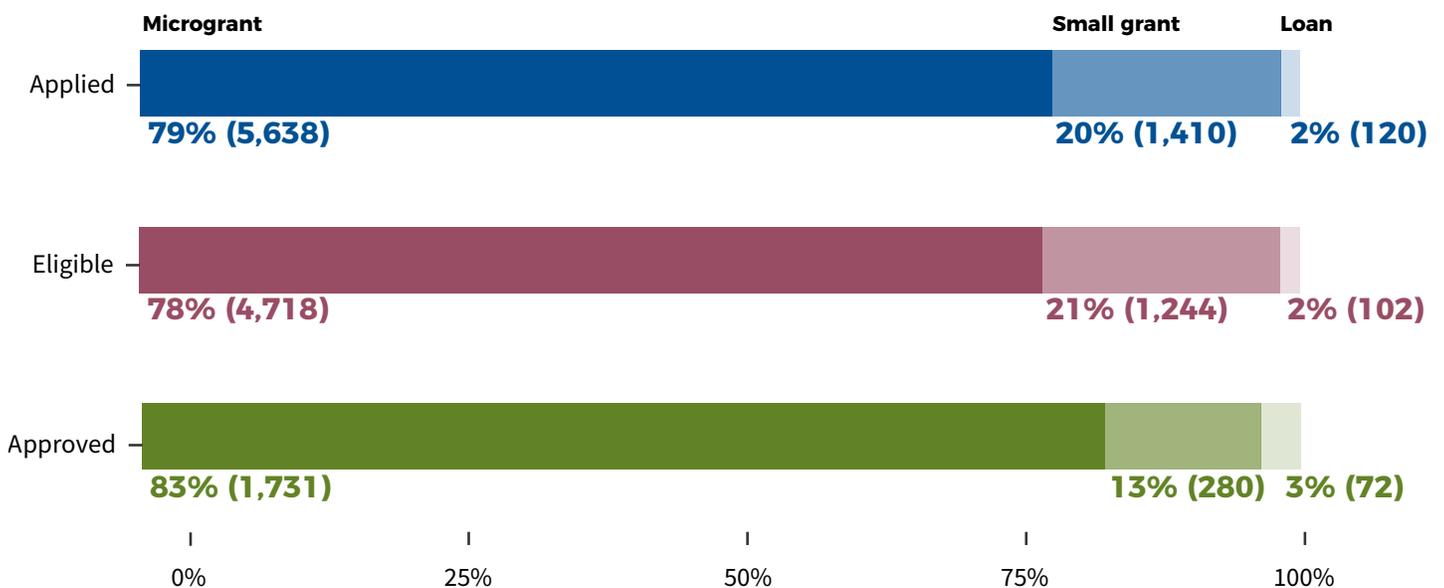

Rather than exclude certain types of businesses or neighborhoods over a certain income threshold, the Relief Fund reviewed every application. This process took into consideration each business’s role in its neighborhood as well as the Philadelphia economy. For example, a daycare located in a high-income area provides a critical service may primarily employ people who live in a low or moderate-income area.

The Relief Fund’s selection criteria placed higher weight on factors such as location in a low-income area of the city, being an industry highly impacted by the COVID-19 crisis, and employment levels. A low impact score was the main reason an eligible business was not approved.

Financial viability of the business was also taken into consideration during the approval process. The Relief Fund was not intended to be a lifeline for businesses struggling before the COVID-19 crisis or a source of startup capital for new ventures. Business financials and operating history were taken into consideration during the approval process. For the applicants eligible for loans, lack of a viable path to repayment was a potential reason for not being approved.

The approval criteria was favorable for small and microbusinesses. Microenterprise grants for businesses generating less than $500,000 in revenue annually represent 79 percent of applications and 83 percent of approvals.

9 - PIPELINE BY TIER ELIGIBILITY

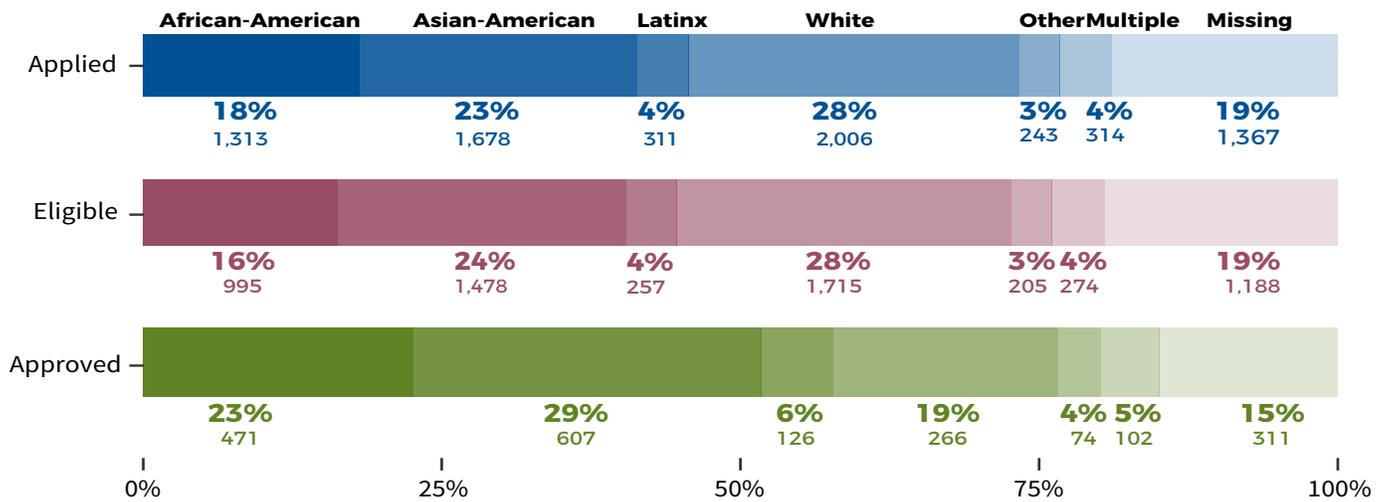

ANALYSIS OF APPLICATIONS & PROCESS

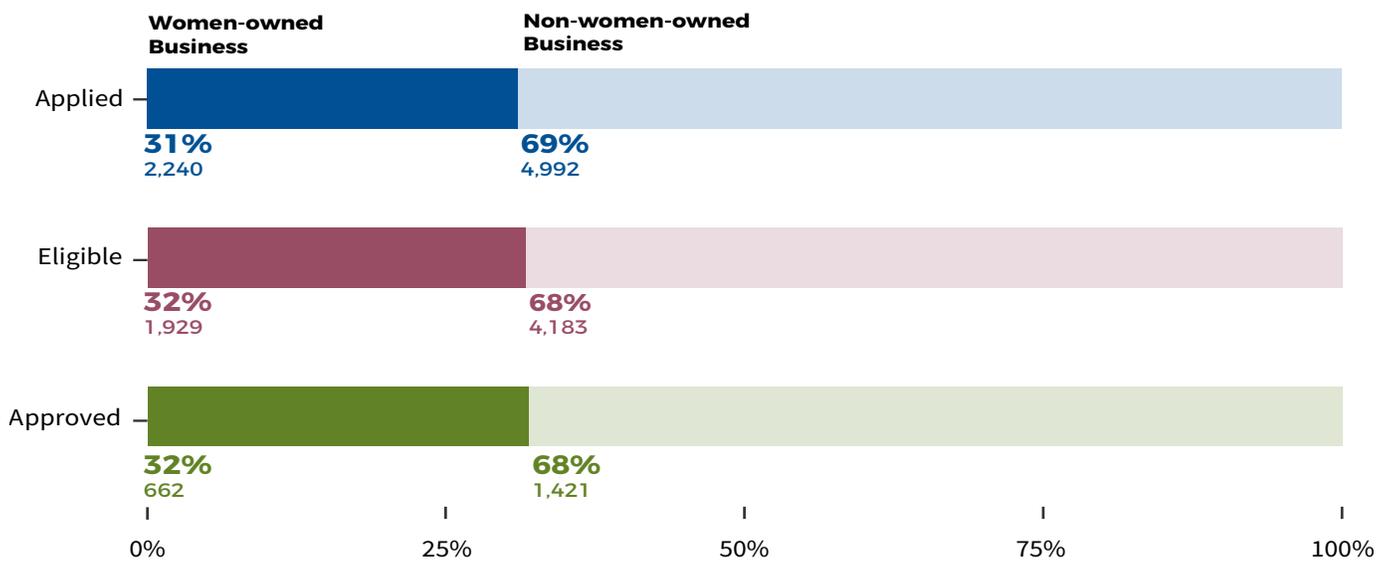

The Relief Fund applied an equity lens to the review process to ensure participation from historically disadvantaged populations. Minority-owned businesses accounted for 54 percent of applications and 66 percent of approvals. Women-owned businesses comprised 31 percent of applications and 32 percent of approvals. This pipeline analysis demonstrates that the percentage of awardees from historically disadvantaged populations compared favorably with the overall number of applicants.

On average, businesses waited 17 business days after applying to receive notification of a decision. Awardees received funds as early as April 10, 2020. The typical duration from notification of a decision to disbursement of funds to a business was 7 days. By the end of May, over 90 percent of funds had been disbursed in an effort to swiftly get dollars into the hands of business owners in need.

10 - PIPELINE BY RACE/ETHNICITY

11 - PIPELINE BY GENDER

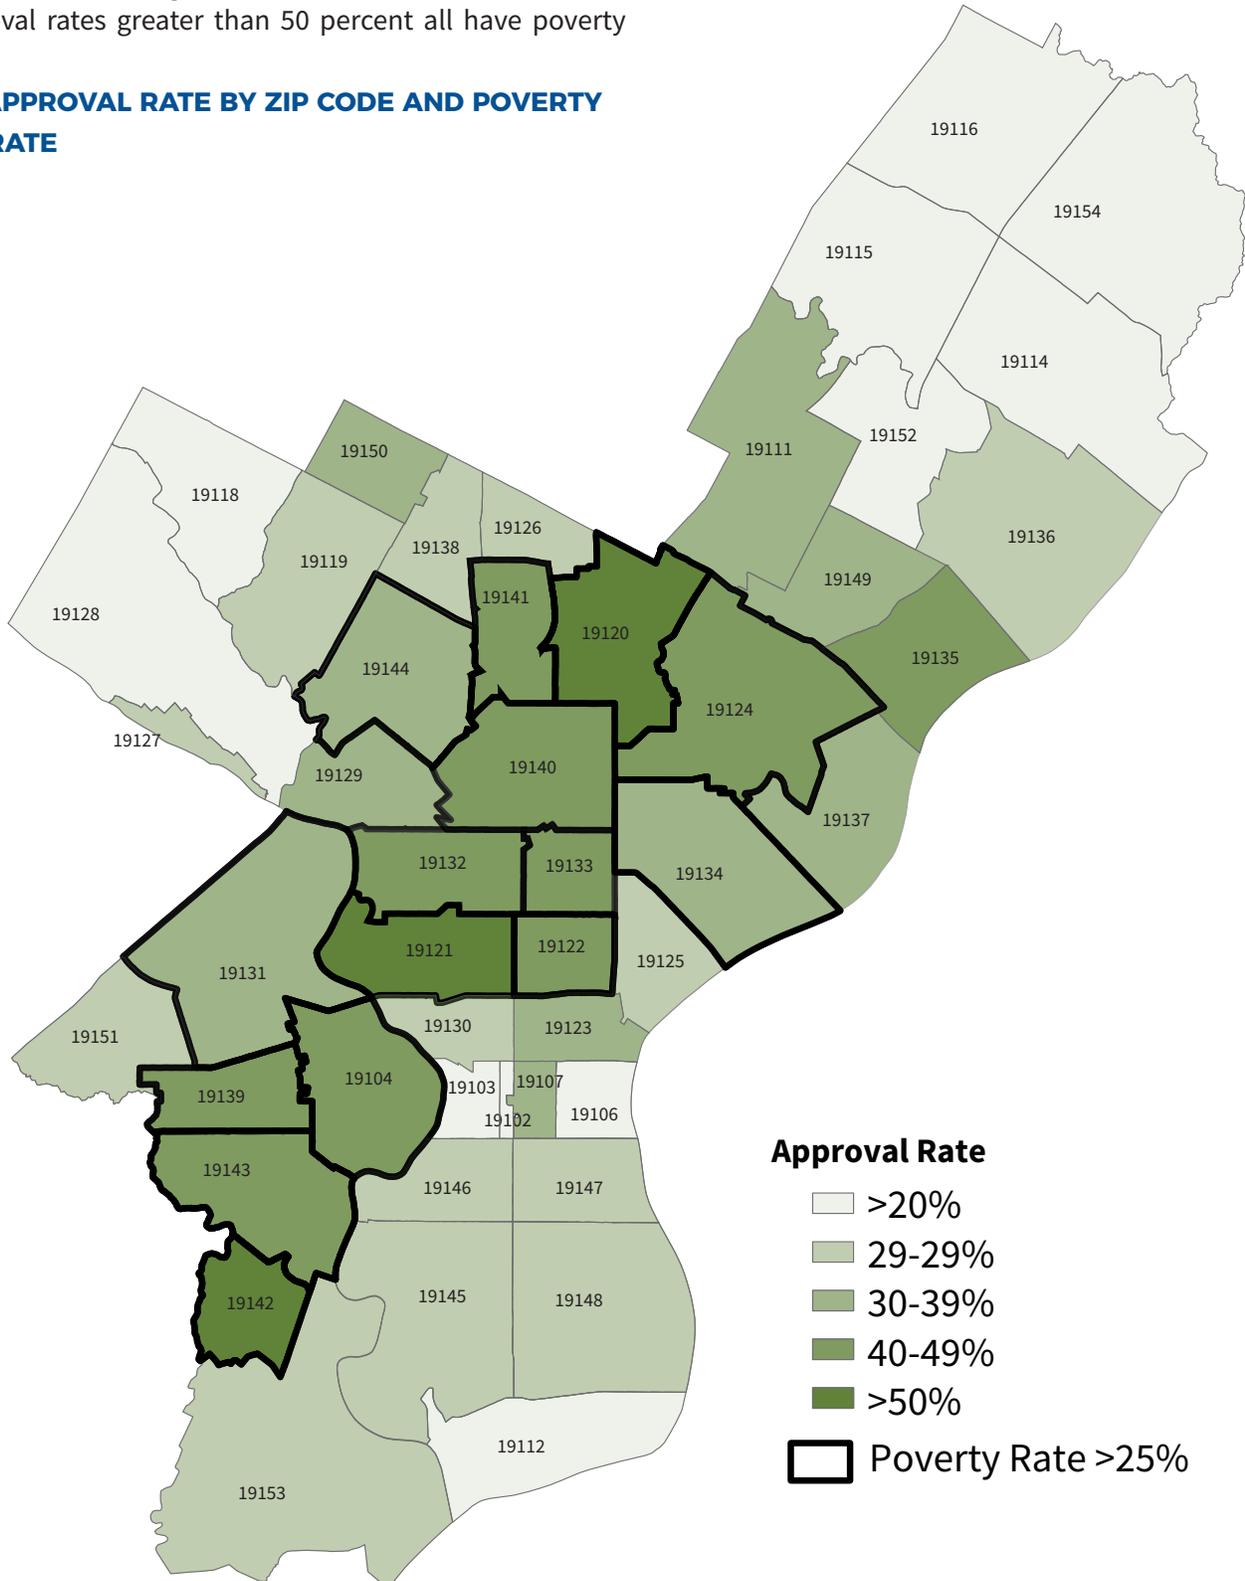

ANALYSIS OF APPLICATIONS & PROCESS

The impact score and approval process was designed to prioritize low-to-moderate income census tracts and census tracts with high poverty. High poverty areas are defined as areas that had a poverty rate equal to or greater than the City average of 25 percent. The ZIP codes with approval rates greater than 50 percent all have poverty rates greater than 25 percent. As the map below shows, there was a strong correlation between high approval rates and high poverty zip codes.

12 - APPROVAL RATE BY ZIP CODE AND POVERTY RATE

ONGOING ANALYSIS

As the City's strategy shifts from responding to the crisis to restarting, recharging, and reimagining Philadelphia's economy, the Department of Commerce and PIDC will continue to work together to evaluate the impact of the Relief Fund and the evolving needs of small businesses in Philadelphia.

Businesses who received grants or loans from the Relief Fund will be required to submit a brief quarterly report for at least a year; the frequency may be reduced to annual reporting thereafter. The first report will be due later this summer, once more businesses move into the reopening phase. Reporting will focus on employment and revenue, which will be compared to the pre-COVID numbers that were provided in the application. It will also be used as an opportunity to survey business owners on satisfaction with the Relief Fund application process, general business confidence, evolving needs, and adaptations that the business owners have made to restart, recharge, and reimagine their small business.
