

Business Recovery Payment Agreement Calculator

Get back on track with your business taxes

In response to the disruptions caused to local businesses by the COVID-19 pandemic, the Philadelphia Department of Revenue has created a special business tax recovery payment agreement.

You can use this agreement if you:

- Are struggling to pay business taxes due after March 1, 2020 and
- Do not owe taxes before that date.

First, you'll need to file any missing returns before you request an agreement. Once you are in an agreement, you'll be able to apply for other city business financing and assistance programs. You'll also be able to apply for licenses and permits.

Do not use this calculator for business taxes due before March 2020. Please use our standard or preferred business calculators at www.phila.gov/payment-plans.

How does this payment agreement help?

You will have up-to 12 months to pay your principal amount due, without making a down payment. Terms may be as substantial as a 100% waiver of the interest and penalty you owe. You will also not accrue any interest or penalties during the length of your payment agreement.

How can you find your current balance?

Find your current balance by logging into your tax account on <https://ework.phila.gov/revenue/>. If you have questions, please email us at revenue@phila.gov or call (215) 686-6600.

Disclaimer

This calculator provides an estimate of monthly payment amounts. The official amount, and terms, will be disclosed in an agreement letter you will receive from the Department of Revenue after choosing a plan and working with a department representative.

How it works

The calculator estimates your monthly payments for a specified payment agreement term length. To use the calculator, first enter your current principal, interest, and penalties. If you don't know your interest and penalty, fill in what you can. The calculator will show your total balance. Then, enter the number of months (up to 12 only) that make your payment agreement affordable for your business.
