We know that the role of a resource parent can be challenging and even sometimes confusing. This handbook provides important information about all aspects of foster care as well as numerous helpful resources that can provide assistance and support.
DHS leads the Quality Parenting Initiative (QPI) to ensure that resource parents have the support and resources they need to help children and youth living in foster care thrive.

QPI is an approach to strengthening foster care by refocusing on excellent parenting for all children in the child welfare system. QPI is creating a movement to transform foster care through a network of families, youth, agency leaders, judicial leaders, agency staff, and community organizations committed to developing and sharing results-based solutions, advocating for and implementing policy and practice changes, and changing the culture of child welfare.

The Philadelphia QPI committee consists of a diverse group of members including resource and birth parents, youth, child welfare practitioners, and child advocates.

Philadelphia QPI’s brand statement:
Philadelphia’s resource parents are integral, respected, and progressive partners in the child welfare system. They make an enduring commitment to each child in their care, while honoring and strengthening the child’s family ties. They believe in every child’s right to thrive.

For more information contact dhs.fosteringphilly@phila.gov or 215-683-5709.
What is Foster Care?  Foster care is a social service that provides a substitute family for children placed away from their parents or guardians by the Department of Human Services. This includes, but is not limited to, placements in foster family homes, care by relatives, known as kinship care, and pre-adoptive homes.

The primary goal of child welfare services is to preserve and strengthen the child’s own home whenever possible. However, sometimes birth parents or other caregivers cannot keep the child safe. When this occurs, life in a family foster home, such as yours, can come closer to normal family living than any other type of temporary placement.

As a resource parent, you play a central role in helping DHS keep its commitment to permanency for all children in care. Permanency, which means that children and youth grow up in a permanent, loving home, can occur by reuniting children and youth with their birth parents, achieving adoption, or establishing permanent legal custodianship. The resource parent is a key member of the permanency planning team.

Who are Philadelphia’s resource parents? • Resource parents come from all walks of life.
• They are single, married, divorced, male or female, straight or LGBTQ.
• They can be young (at least 21), or already grandparents.
• They can live in apartments, houses or farms, stay at home with children, or have a career.
• Some are able-bodied, while others live with disabilities.
• They come from all racial and ethnic backgrounds and belong to many different communities of faith.
• Many are related to the children they care for (sometimes called “kin” or “relative caregivers”).
• What they all have in common is a genuine love for children and a desire to make a difference in the lives of children and families.

What are the roles and responsibilities of resource parents? Resource parents provide a child or children with a safe and healthy environment in a family home, on a temporary basis, until the child can achieve permanency. In this way, the foster family meets the extensive day-to-day needs of the children and youth in their care.

Resource parents also participate as full partners in the child’s team to achieve safe and timely permanency whether through reunification, adoption, or permanent legal custodianship. The participation of resource parents in team meetings can help facilitate reunification with the child’s family of origin and ensure more children will end up in a safe and healthy family setting that is permanent.

Successful resource parents meet the child’s needs, may be in more than one placement while in the child welfare system. The new placement may include a relative, a different foster home, or a residential treatment facility, among others. Resource parents prepare and support children as they transition from one placement to another.

How and why do children and youth enter foster care? DHS removes children or youth from their homes when it is clearly necessary to protect the health, safety, and/or welfare of the child. Safety concerns may come to DHS’ attention as a result of an emergency or crisis or through a report made by a relative, neighbor, teacher, doctor or other person who has observed or suspects the child is being neglected or abused.

DHS is required by law to investigate reports of abuse and neglect, provide services to help keep children and families together, and remove a child or youth only when it is necessary to ensure the child’s safety.

Children enter foster care in Philadelphia through court-ordered placement. This occurs when DHS obtains an emergency order, also known as an Order of Protective Custody (OPC) for placement, from a judge.

How do I become a resource parent? The first step is to choose a foster care agency. The certification process takes approximately 3-6 months to complete. Resource parents receive specialized training both before becoming resource parents and over time (at least 6 hours per year is required).

In addition, all prospective resource parents must demonstrate that they have not been convicted of violent acts or crimes against children, are in sound health, and can provide a safe and stable home for a child.

What makes a successful resource parent? Parenting a child who has been separated from her parents, often under traumatic or stressful circumstances, can be challenging. Resource parents not only care about children, but are willing to continue learning new things about themselves.

Successful resource parents are patient, have received training, and are willing to reach out for help and support.

They have, or develop, excellent communication and problem-solving skills. They are able to express the safety and support both the physical and emotional needs of the children in their home. Most importantly, they view themselves as part of a team, including the child’s parents and all of the professionals involved.

The primary goal of this team is to ensure that the child has the opportunity to grow up safely in a permanent, loving family. This is often referred to as permanency and is different from foster care, which by definition, is intended to be temporary. The permanent family may be the birth parents, other relatives, legal guardians or an adoptive family.

Successful resource parents must work closely with all members of the team, sharing information, giving and receiving support, and ensuring that the child feels and is safe and free from threats of harm or danger.
How can I learn more about what it takes to be a successful resource parent?

While the licensing and assessment process will help you discover if you can be a successful resource parent, you can begin by performing a self-assessment. Here are some ideas to get you started:

• Read and learn about it – Get the most accurate and current information on resource parenting. You can read books, watch videos or learn about resource parenting in other ways that are meaningful to you.

• Interact with other foster families – The Philadelphia Foster Parents Association, Grand Central and other organizations listed in the resource directory often sponsor activities where you can get acquainted with other foster families. Foster care agencies also sponsor informational sessions, and local, state and national conferences are held each year where you can network with other foster families and learn more about foster care.

How does DHS decide where to place a child that has been removed from her home?

When a child must be removed from their home, it is DHS’ policy to first consider relatives or other individuals who have a significant relationship to the child or the child’s parents before considering other foster parents. This first placement option is known as Kinship Care and is further discussed on page 26.

• Ask yourself how you feel about the families of children and youth in foster care.

• Will you be able to work with them respectfully and view them as part of the team, in spite of the abuse or neglect involved in a particular case?

• How do you relate to people who have different values, lifestyles or sexual orientations than you? How do you relate to people of different cultures, ethnicities or religions?

• Think about how you handle stress and challenges in your life.

• What is rewarding to you? Resource parenting can be very rewarding, but often the rewards are not immediate.

How much information will I receive about a child or youth before I have to make a decision?

It is the responsibility of DHS, the CUA and the provider agency to provide you with as much information as possible about each youth you are in training to care for as also your right and responsibility to ask questions and get as much information as you need to feel comfortable and confident when accepting a child or youth for placement in your home. If information is available at the time you are considering a child or youth, the team, in spite of any questions you may wish to ask each time a child or youth is referred to you.

You should also understand that many times children and youth need a foster care placement in the midst of a crisis or an emergency situation. In these instances, you may not receive a lot of information prior to the child’s coming into your home, but you should still ask questions and the DHS Intake Worker or CUA Case Manager should get information to you in a timely manner.

Do you have a supportive extended family, friends, a community of faith or others to turn to when you face challenging circumstances?

When I am a resource parent, will there be a very strong reason for their separation.

Do you need immediate gratification?

Do you need immediate gratification? Resource parenting can be very rewarding, but often the rewards are not immediate.

What is rewarding to you? Resource parenting can be very rewarding, but often the rewards are not immediate.

How does DHS decide where to place a child that has been removed from her home?

When a child must be removed from their home, it is DHS’ policy to first consider relatives or other individuals who have a significant relationship to the child or the child’s parents before considering other foster parents. This first placement option is known as Kinship Care and is further discussed on page 26.

If there is no appropriate kinship placement readily available for a child, DHS works to match the needs of the child with the strengths and capabilities of available foster families. In addition, it is DHS policy to keep siblings together whenever possible in the same home unless there is a very strong reason for their separation.

It is also DHS policy to place children and youth in their own communities whenever possible.

How much information will I receive about a child or youth before I have to make a decision?

It is the responsibility of DHS, the CUA and the provider agency to provide you with as much information as possible about each youth you are in training to care for as also your right and responsibility to ask questions and get as much information as you need to feel comfortable and confident when accepting a child or youth for placement in your home. If information is available at the time you are considering a child or youth, the team, in spite of any questions you may wish to ask each time a child or youth is referred to you.

You should also understand that many times children and youth need a foster care placement in the midst of a crisis or an emergency situation. In these instances, you may not receive a lot of information prior to the child’s coming into your home, but you should still ask questions and the DHS Intake Worker or CUA Case Manager should get information to you in a timely manner.

Always have the right to decide not to accept the placement of a particular child or youth if you feel you do not have enough information, or if the information provided leaves you with concerns about your ability to meet the particular child’s needs.

When I am a resource parent, will there be a very strong reason for their separation.

Do you have a supportive extended family, friends, a community of faith or others to turn to when you face challenging circumstances?

You always have the right to decide not to accept the placement of a particular child or youth if you feel you do not have enough information, or if the information provided leaves you with concerns about your ability to meet the particular child’s needs.

When I am a resource parent, will I be able to go on vacation?

Vacations and other types of breaks, including respite care, are important ways for resource parents to take care of themselves and continue to be successful as resource parents.

Respite Care is the temporary care for a child or youth, intended to give the youth or caregiver (or both) a break.

You may also take the children or youth in your care on vacation with you locally or outside of the city or state, provided it does not conflict with a court order. You will learn more about travel regulations in your resource parent trainings.

The important thing to remember is that communication is essential when any plans are made that will disrupt the regular routine. For example, the visitation schedule with the child’s biological family will need to be considered when planning vacations. In some cases, missed visits can be made up after the vacation.

When I am a resource parent, will I still be able to practice my own religion?

Being a resource parent does not affect your religious practices. Additionally, you may invite, but not require, the child in your care to attend religious services with you. Children in foster care need opportunities for spiritual development, in accordance with their religious beliefs.

It is also important to know that the decision about the child’s religion continues to belong to the parent. At no time is a resource parent to require a child to accept their religious beliefs or activities. If a child in your care chooses not to attend religious services with you, you will need to arrange for appropriate supervision for the child during these times.

If the child or youth follows a religion different from that of the resource parent, it is your responsibility to allow the youth to practice their own religion.
What rules and responsibilities govern providing transportation for children in foster care?
Resource parents are responsible, together with the foster care agency and CUA Case Manager, for arranging transportation to the child’s medical appointments, visits with family members, court hearings and other essential activities or events. The same is true for getting children to school when they arrive in a resource home; on-going transportation supports are available depending on factors including distance to school and the child’s age or developmental capacity.

Are there other kinds of insurance I need to have as a resource parent?
Health insurance for children in foster care will be provided through Medical Assistance.
Resource parents are responsible for arranging and purchasing their own medical insurance.

What do I do if I have concerns or problems?
Experienced resource parents know that things don’t always go smoothly. There may be times when you will not get all the information related to the child’s medical care or schooling that you need in order to care for the child. There may be times when you are not able to get access to the services a child in your home needs. You may not always get notice of a court hearing or important meetings in time to make arrangements to attend or participate.
You may encounter behavior or discipline challenges you were not prepared for, or conflicts with the child’s family members, or various professionals involved with the case.

You may experience frustration if you feel that questions you have about legal or financial matters are not answered to your satisfaction.
You have several resources available in these situations. The first is to raise your concerns or questions with the Resource Parent Support Worker or the CUA Case Manager.
If you do not get a satisfactory resolution, you can ask for a supervisor. Each agency has what is called the “chain of command” and you can go up this chain until your concerns and questions are resolved to your satisfaction. You can also contact the Commissioner’s Action Response Office (CARO) at 215-683-6000 or dhscaro@phila.gov. CARO responds to individuals who have questions, concerns, or complaints about any services provided by DHS or its contracted providers, including CUAs.
The child in your home will have an attorney, also called a child advocate. This is another person you can turn to when you are trying to get information or access services on behalf of the child or youth in your home.

Finally, one of your best resources in all of these situations will be other experienced resource parents. You are encouraged to join a local resource parent support group, as well as the Philadelphia Resource Family Association. Your Resource Parent Support Worker can help you locate a resource parent support group in your area, and there is contact information provided in the Resource Directory of this handbook.

What do I do if I have questions or situations that need immediate attention late at night, on a weekend or holiday?
Through the CUA, you have 24-hour, 7-day a week access to help, support, and crisis management. A place to record the after-hours number is provided on page 72 of this handbook. In addition, you should discuss crisis management and after-hours support with your CUA Case Manager and Resource Parent Support Worker.
DHS is committed to ensuring that all children and youth have the opportunity to grow up in a safe, permanent family. DHS believes that the entire community must play a role in child welfare. This role includes ensuring that children and youth grow up in a permanent, loving home with family members to whom they can be connected, even when they become adults—and that no youth grow up with uncertainty about where they will live tomorrow or who they can rely on for emotional support, now and in the future.

The first choice for permanency is with one or both parents. When children and youth are removed from their homes, diligent efforts are made to see that they can return home safely and quickly. But when a return home in a timely manner is not possible, DHS has an equally important responsibility to see that they are placed into safe, loving, and permanent homes. This can happen through adoption or Permanent Legal Custodianship, also known as PLC. Long-term foster care is no longer an acceptable permanency option. DHS has made a commitment that no child or youth should leave foster care without a permanent connection to a family. You, the resource parent, play a central role in helping DHS keep this commitment.

What does the law say about permanency?
A federal law, known as the Adoption and Safe Families Act (ASFA) requires permanency plans for all children, and sets timelines for achieving these goals.

ASFA says that if a child has been in foster care for 15 of the most recent 22 months, DHS must ask the court to take away (“terminate”) parental rights and find a qualified family to provide a permanent home for the child through adoption or permanent legal custody.

While there are some exceptions to this requirement, in most cases this is the timetable that DHS must follow. The reason for this timeline is so that each child will have the opportunity for permanence according to appropriate developmental timeframes. Waiting, even a short time, to feel secure and know where you belong can seem like an eternity to a child or youth.

To achieve these goals and meet these timelines, permanency planning for each child in foster care must begin the very first day they come into care.
PERMANENCY FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH IN FOSTER CARE

What are the three permanency goals? REUNIFICATION: The primary goal is reunification, which refers to a youth returning home to their family. Reunification can also refer to a child’s return to their custodian or adoptive parent after a period of time in foster care.

ADOPTION: If a child cannot be returned home safely, the next most permanent plan is for them to be adopted by a qualified and loving family.

The adoption process involves the termination of the parent’s rights and the creation of parental rights for new caregivers(s); adoption creates a new legal arrangement for the child, and cannot be related to the child or youth before the adoption. Most children in placement are entered into a lifelong relationship with their parents (birth family). Adoption and PLC allow caregivers to make the best efforts of many people, which is why DHS uses a team approach. The team approach begins as soon as the youth comes into foster care. A case planning meeting will occur within 20–25 days of the child being removed from their home. Additional meetings will continue every 90 days until the child or youth is successfully settled in a permanent home. At each team conference, the child’s or youth’s needs will be discussed and plans will be made for best meeting those needs. As the person who lives with the youth 24 hours a day, seven days a week, you bring important perspectives and information to these meetings.

Resource parent’s role in reunification You can assist in the reunification process in many ways. Some ways you can be most helpful include:

• Being a role model and mentor for the parents.
• Supporting the child’s or youth’s relationship with her parents.
• Sharing helpful information with the parents about health care, educational progress and other issues—examples might include sharing copies of school report cards, notes from doctor visits or recent photos.
• Remaining positive and supportive in following family visitation plans and telephone contact.
• Providing emotional support for youth as they prepare to return home.
• Being available to both the youth and her parents after she returns home as a resource and source of support.
• Allowing parents and other family members to bring plans to help the child return home, you play an instrumental role in whatever permanent plan is best.

For example: You can consider making a permanent commitment to or adoption or placement. Ask your CUA agency case manager to help you understand the differences between adoption and PLC so that you can make a wise and informed decision. If you do adopt or assume PLC, you can continue. If you adopt or are awarded PLC of a youth under 18 or 16, it can continue to age 21 provided the youth is still with you and enrolled in school or treatment, working part time, learning a trade, or unable to do any of the above for a documented reason. Annually you will have to provide that information to Philadelphia DHS upon request.

Resource parent’s role in alternative permanency plans

If a child cannot return home, you play an instrumental role in whatever permanent plan is best.

• Set up mechanisms for children and youth to communicate with their siblings by phone, email or in other ways.
• Seek to continue this contact even if the other siblings go into a permanent placement.

Resource parent’s role in alternative permanency plans

If it is not possible for siblings in care to be together, it is required that they have at least biweekly visits. As a resource parent, you can help honor sibling relationships in several ways, including:

• Creating a sibling support network that is the highest level of legal or arranged care. Nearly three quarters of all children and youth in foster care have one or more siblings and it is the policy and practice of the foster care system to place siblings together in the same home whenever possible. Sibling relationships are among the most important connections a youth will ever have, and they often create the best opportunity for permanency.

• Get to know other resource parents who care for siblings to learn about the dynamics of parenting multiple children from the same family.
• Plan individual time with each child or youth.
• If siblings are separated, plan activities to bring them together as often as possible—play dates, lunches, attending the other siblings’ sporting events or musical concerts, etc.

Resource parent’s role in alternative permanency plans

If a child cannot be related to the child or youth after the adoption. As the person who lives with the youth under 16, you represent the highest level of legal or arranged care. Nearly three quarters of all children and youth in foster care have one or more siblings and it is the policy and practice of the foster care system to place siblings together in the same home whenever possible. Sibling relationships are among the most important connections a youth will ever have, and they often create the best opportunity for permanency.

• Get to know other resource parents who care for siblings to learn about the dynamics of parenting multiple children from the same family.
• Plan individual time with each child or youth.
• If siblings are separated, plan activities to bring them together as often as possible—play dates, lunches, attending the other siblings’ sporting events or musical concerts, etc.

Resource parent’s role in alternative permanency plans

If it is not possible for siblings in care to be together, it is required that they have at least biweekly visits. As a resource parent, you can help honor sibling relationships in several ways, including:

• Create a sibling support network that is the highest level of legal or arranged care. Nearly three quarters of all children and youth in foster care have one or more siblings and it is the policy and practice of the foster care system to place siblings together in the same home whenever possible. Sibling relationships are among the most important connections a youth will ever have, and they often create the best opportunity for permanency.

• Get to know other resource parents who care for siblings to learn about the dynamics of parenting multiple children from the same family.
• Plan individual time with each child or youth.
• If siblings are separated, plan activities to bring them together as often as possible—play dates, lunches, attending the other siblings’ sporting events or musical concerts, etc.

Resource parent’s role in alternative permanency plans

If a child cannot be related to the child or youth after the adoption. As the person who lives with the youth under 16, you represent the highest level of legal or arranged care. Nearly three quarters of all children and youth in foster care have one or more siblings and it is the policy and practice of the foster care system to place siblings together in the same home whenever possible. Sibling relationships are among the most important connections a youth will ever have, and they often create the best opportunity for permanency.

• Get to know other resource parents who care for siblings to learn about the dynamics of parenting multiple children from the same family.
PERMANENCY FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH IN FOSTER CARE

If you are not able to make a permanent commitment, you can still assist in permanency planning by:

• Helping the team to identify potential families.

• Giving the child “permission” to think about adoption or PLC with another family and providing emotional support through this process.

• Providing transportation and other supports so the child can participate in recruitment activities.

• Being a resource to the child, biological family and the adoptive or PLC family during the transition time.

• Ensuring that the child has an up-to-date lifebook, described on page 38, and other special items to take with them to their new home.

• Tips for helping prepare children and youth through the recruitment process for a new permanent home can be found in Appendix Two on page 60.

“If I would say that being a foster parent to a teen is not easy, but there’s so much joy!”
- Carly, foster parent and adoptive mom

“No matter the age, you still need somebody to love you.”
- Ruby, youth formerly in foster care
Resource Parent Responsibilities

Assisting children in having a strong, informed voice in decision making includes:

- Ensuring that children 14 or older (or younger if deemed appropriate) is invited to Single Case Plan and other related meetings.
- Ensuring that the child or youth attends court hearings related to their case and providing an update to the courts on the youth’s progress in your home.
- Requesting that meetings and court hearings be arranged around the child’s schedule to avoid unnecessary school or work absences.
- Working with CUA Case Managers, child advocates and others to help the child develop the confidence and skills needed to participate in a meaningful way in these meetings and hearings.
- When there is a legitimate reason for a child not to be present, arranging for their input to be gathered in advance and shared with the team and/or court.
- Providing the child with opportunities to participate in meetings or hearings related to their siblings.

Child/Youth Responsibilities

It is the child’s responsibility, with support and guidance, to:

- Adapt to a new environment, including adjusting to feelings of sadness and/or anger.
- Speak up and share thoughts, questions, concerns and needs both in the home and at meetings or hearings.
- Participate in meetings, hearings, family visits with family, siblings and/or potential permanent families and recruitment activities.
- Ask for help or support when needed, in order to take full advantage of these opportunities for participating in decision making about their life.
- Achieve relevant objectives and activities in the Single Case Plan (SCP).
- Go to school, if age appropriate.

Family Responsibilities

The child’s parents have several responsibilities while their child is in foster care. Some of these include:

- Help the child or youth adjust by staying in contact with them as well as the foster family and agency.
- Attend all court hearings and family team conferences, and participate in case planning.
- With the help of their attorney, learn about and exercise their legal rights and responsibilities.
- Identify their own strengths, needs, and sources of support.
- Identify relatives and other people who can be a resource to them and/or their child.
- Work toward reunification, by changing the conditions or behaviors that caused the child to be placed in foster care and by meeting the objectives in the SCP.
- Provide continuity by visiting on a regular basis.
- Show support for their relationship with the foster family.
- Ask for help when it is needed.

It is important for all children and youth to have a voice in the decisions that are made about their lives. Inclusion in case planning and decision making is required by law for all youth ages 14 and older. It is the role and responsibility of the adults to care for and support the child, inform them about the process and decision points, provide opportunities for their voice to be heard, and listen to their input.

Children also need opportunities to develop trusting relationships with resource parents, case managers, and child advocates, who represent the child or youth in legal matters and court proceedings related to their case, before they are likely to feel comfortable expressing honest feelings, especially when conflicts arise.
CHILD WELFARE SYSTEM

DHS and CUA Responsibilities

CUAs and DHS are responsible for ensuring that each youth remains safe and well cared for while in foster care and that the parents receive the supports and services they need as they work towards reunification. Their responsibilities include developing and implementing a permanency plan for the child or youth and seeing that all legal requirements and timelines are met. The CUA will work with your foster care agency (also known as a provider agency) to achieve these goals. While some roles and responsibilities are shared by these two agencies, there are specific times when each agency will have lead responsibility.

Specific CUA Responsibilities

• Assess needs of child and family.
• Develop Single Case Plans (SCP) for each family.
• Meet regularly with child, family and foster family.
• Attend all court hearings and family team conferences, and participate in case planning.
• Invite and encourage everyone’s participation in case planning and court hearings.
• Monitor everyone’s progress towards meeting case planning objectives.
• Coordinate the efforts of all team members.
• Keep records for each child and family served.
• Ensure that all medical, behavioral health, and educational needs are met.
• Ensure that the child and family, including their siblings, have regular visits.
• Work with the Law Department to prepare all required documents for court hearings.
• With the help of the legal advocates, ensure that the family, resource family and child are prepared for all court hearings. This includes providing, in writing, the name and contact information for the youth’s attorney to both the youth and the resource parents.
• Be available at all times to resource family, children and youth—this includes ensuring that all parties have received after-hours emergency contact information in writing.
• Attend court hearings, be prepared to provide updates on child wellbeing including education, and recommend permanency plan to Family Court.
• Work with all team members to transition the child or youth from foster care to return home, adoption, PLC, or independence.
• Ensure that older youth are equipped with the skills they will need to live as adults—including post-secondary education, job readiness, employment opportunities, health care access, housing and life skills. This also includes discussing independent living services and options directly with the youth.
• Ensure resource parents have the support and resources they need to successfully care for their youth.
• Keep records for children placed in foster care.
• Coordinate the efforts of all team members.
• Monitor everyone’s progress towards meeting case planning objectives.
• Invite and encourage everyone’s participation in case planning and court hearings.
• Attend court hearings, be prepared to provide updates on child wellbeing including education, and recommend permanency plan to Family Court.
• Work with all team members to transition the child or youth from foster care to return home, adoption, PLC, or independence.
• Ensure that older youth are equipped with the skills they will need to live as adults—including post-secondary education, job readiness, employment opportunities, health care access, housing and life skills. This also includes discussing independent living services and options directly with the youth.
• Ensure resource parents have the support and resources they need to successfully care for their youth.
• Keep records for children placed in foster care.
• Coordinate the efforts of all team members.
• Monitor everyone’s progress towards meeting case planning objectives.
• Invite and encourage everyone’s participation in case planning and court hearings.
• Attend court hearings, be prepared to provide updates on child wellbeing including education, and recommend permanency plan to Family Court.
• Work with all team members to transition the child or youth from foster care to return home, adoption, PLC, or independence.
• Ensure that older youth are equipped with the skills they will need to live as adults—including post-secondary education, job readiness, employment opportunities, health care access, housing and life skills. This also includes discussing independent living services and options directly with the youth.
• Ensure resource parents have the support and resources they need to successfully care for their youth.
• Keep records for children placed in foster care.
• Coordinate the efforts of all team members.
• Monitor everyone’s progress towards meeting case planning objectives.

Specific Foster Care Agency Responsibilities

• Ensure that resource parents have child/youth development training appropriate to the ages of children and youth placed in their home.
• Assist with transportation and other logistics for school, visitation, medical and therapeutic appointments.
• Provide services and support to all youth and families to help them achieve permanency.
• Communicate with resource families to ensure that they are informed of all developments related to their child/youth.
• Respond to phone calls or other inquiries from children, youth and families, including resource families, about the services and resources available to them.
• Participating as they are able in Family Team Conferences.
• Providing continuity and support during transitions when children and youth move in and out of foster care.
The Family Division, sometimes referred to as Family Court, is one of the three major divisions of the Philadelphia Court of Common Pleas. Court hearings related to children and youth in foster care are referred to as dependency cases. There are several important times during a child’s stay in foster care when the case comes before a judge in Family Court. At a minimum hearings are held every three months.

Resource parents and children of all ages are entitled, by law, to receive notice of all court hearings. While judges have the responsibility to make decisions about children and youth, they can only make good decisions if they receive good information. As a resource parent, the information you can provide about the child in your home is essential for good decisions to be made. Therefore, it is very important for you to stay informed about court hearings and ensure that your voice is heard throughout the process. You can also play an important role in making sure that the children’s and youth’s voices are heard at every step along the way. If you have questions about the court proceedings or schedule of hearings, you can talk to your CUA Case Manager, the child’s attorney, or call the Court Operations office.
Attorneys, Legal Advocates

While children and youth are in foster care, they are entitled to an attorney who will ensure that their legal rights are attended to and that their voice is heard in legal proceedings. Parents also have attorneys to represent them throughout the legal process. The DHS attorney (or solicitor) will ensure that all court documents and petitions are filed in a timely manner and that the case is progressing according to the mandated timelines.

Resource parents do not typically have or need attorneys. They are not considered a legal party to the case, and do not have the need attorneys. They are not considered a legal party to the case, and do not have the need for the resource parent to bring these concerns to the CUA Case Manager and in some cases, advocate for a new attorney to be provided.

Family Court Judge

It is the judge’s responsibility to make decisions regarding the case according to the facts and the law. To do this, the judge will:

- Return phone calls and responding to questions or concerns.
- Meeting with their client on a regular basis.
- Preparing their client for all court events.
- Coming to court prepared to provide the best representation to their client.
- Participating in other case-related activities and meetings.
- Ensuring that the case proceeds in a timely manner and meets all legal requirements.
- It is important for a resource parent to know who each child’s attorney is, and to support their relationship with the attorney. If a child does not have an attorney, is not happy or comfortable with their attorney or has an attorney that is not fulfilling the responsibilities listed above, it is important for the resource parent to bring these concerns to the CUA Case Manager and in some cases, advocate for a new attorney to be provided.

Types of Court Hearings

There are five major types of court hearings in dependency cases. These are:

- Shelter Care Hearing: The hearing at which the court determines whether emergency placement is necessary and whether to allow the child to remain in out-of-home care until the next hearing. In Philadelphia, this hearing must be held within 72 hours of the child’s removal from her home.
- Adjudicatory Hearing: A fact-finding hearing where the judge reviews the allegations presented in the petition. The petition is a legal document filed by Philadelphia DHS, which contains the allegations presented in the petition. The Adjudicatory Hearing is held 10 days after the Shelter Care Hearing.
- Permanency Hearing: A court hearing to consider a child or youth’s need for and permanent placement in a timely manner. The hearing must be held within six months of a child’s placement in foster care, and revisited every six months at a minimum thereafter until permanence is achieved. Typically, Permanency Hearings are where the resource parent can have the greatest opportunity for input.
- Termination of Parental Rights (TPR) Hearing: If family reunification has been ruled out and adoption has been determined the next best option, the Department will petition (request) for termination of parents’ rights to the child, which frees the child for adoption. If parental rights have been terminated the parents no longer have legal rights pertaining to the youth.
- Hearings to complete a youth’s legal move to a new, permanent family: Adoption finalization which takes place only after parental rights have been terminated.

Tips for Participating in Court

- Stay informed about court dates and times. Speak up and ask for information if you do not feel you are getting what you need.
- Ask the CUA Case Manager or the Resource Parent Support Worker from your foster care agency and the attorney involved with the case to explain the purpose of each hearing to you and to help you understand your role.
- Work with the CUA Case Manager and attorney to get a sense of what to expect and how to participate in court hearings, including who will be present, what the purpose of the hearing is, what will happen and be said during court (so the youth does not feel blindsided) and what will happen afterwards. Be available to respond to the child’s questions, but be sure to have accurate information.
- Arrive at least 15 minutes early for court hearings to allow time to get through security and find the correct courtroom.
- Bring the child or children whose hearing you are attending, but make sure family members are appropriate for other children in your care.
- Dress professionally and appropriately.
- Bring copies of records with you. This can include notes you have made about the child’s progress while in your care, a log of doctors’ appointments, school records, and notes related to visits with the family.
- Keep in mind that any written materials you bring may be requested and copied by all attorneys for the official record.
When you speak, speak slowly, clearly and use professional language.

Give all of your answers out loud, do not simply nod or shake your head. Refer to the judge as “Your Honor.”

Be as clear and complete as possible when responding to questions or offering information about the child so that the judge will have a full picture upon which to make a decision.

Talk to other resource parents about their experiences in court.

Remember that all information about the case is confidential.

Be prepared to wait, as sometimes the case is confidential.

Understand that there is always the possibility of a postponement, for different reasons.

When a child’s situation requires DHS to place a child into DHS custody. In all cases, the goal is for the child to be reunified with her parents as soon as is safely possible. The length of time you could care for a child while these issues are being resolved could be as short as a few weeks, or as long as several months. When reunification is not possible, a permanent family must be identified and the child must be settled into that permanent home as quickly as possible.

As a kinship caregiver, like all foster care, is intended to be temporary and last only until the child is for the child to be reunified with her parents and when children cannot be reunified with their families in a timely way. Resource families will be the first choice for a permanent resource for the child.

As a kinship caregiver, you could be considered as the child’s permanent family through either adoption or permanent legal custodianship, as the child’s permanent family through either adoption or permanent legal custodianship.

When a child’s situation requires DHS to place a child into DHS custody. In all cases, the goal is for the child to be reunified with her parents as soon as is safely possible. The length of time you could care for a child while these issues are being resolved could be as short as a few weeks, or as long as several months. When reunification is not possible, a permanent family must be identified and the child must be settled into that permanent home as quickly as possible.

As a kinship caregiver, you will be eligible to receive financial assistance and agency support.

A CUA Case Manager and a Resource Parent Support Worker will be assigned closely with you, the child or youth, and the child’s parents in meeting the needs of the child while in your care.

Kinship Care, like all foster care, is intended to be temporary and last only until the child is for the child to be reunified with her parents and when children cannot be reunified with their families in a timely way. Resource families will be the first choice for a permanent resource for the child.

As a resource parent, you have three major sets of responsibilities:

- Meet the day-to-day needs of the children and youth in your home.
- Participate as a full partner in the child’s team to plan for and achieve safety and timely permanency.
- Prepare and support children and youth as they transition from your home to another home, whether that is the home of their family, another relative, another foster home, a residential treatment facility, an adoptive home or a permanent legal custodian.

As you strive to fulfill each of these roles, it is also important that you take care of yourself. Make sure you care for your own health and well-being. Seeking support along the way from friends, family members, support groups, other professionals and your own community of faith is also important. As you strive to fulfill each of these roles, it is also important that you take care of yourself. Make sure you care for your own health and well-being. Seeking support along the way from friends, family members, support groups, other professionals and your own community of faith is also important. As you strive to fulfill each of these roles, it is also important that you take care of yourself. Make sure you care for your own health and well-being. Seeking support along the way from friends, family members, support groups, other professionals and your own community of faith is also important.

If you have been providing foster care for many years, you may have noticed significant changes in the child welfare system. For example, in the past, it may have been acceptable for children to remain in foster care for long periods of time—seen into adulthood. This is no longer acceptable. With all foster children, the goal is permanency and when children cannot be reunified with their families in a timely way, resource parents will be the first choice for a permanent resource for the child.

Resource families are critical members of the child welfare system with important knowledge, skills and information. Resource families have some of the most challenging and emotionally draining roles in the entire child welfare system. You must be prepared to welcome a new child into your home, manage a wide array of behaviors they present, and cope with agency regulations, policies and paperwork. You are also expected to provide mentoring, support, and aid to families.

In your home, you will serve as parent, counselor, healer, mentor, role model and disciplinarian. Beyond your doors, you will be expected to attend meetings and classes at the agency, school and medical appointments, case reviews and court hearings.

As you strive to fulfill each of these roles, it is also important that you take care of yourself. Make sure you care for your own health and well-being. Seeking support along the way from friends, family members, support groups, other professionals and your own community of faith is also important. As you strive to fulfill each of these roles, it is also important that you take care of yourself. Make sure you care for your own health and well-being. Seeking support along the way from friends, family members, support groups, other professionals and your own community of faith is also important. As you strive to fulfill each of these roles, it is also important that you take care of yourself. Make sure you care for your own health and well-being. Seeking support along the way from friends, family members, support groups, other professionals and your own community of faith is also important.

If you have been providing foster care for many years, you may have noticed significant changes in the child welfare system. For example, in the past, it may have been acceptable for children to remain in foster care for long periods of time—seen into adulthood. This is no longer acceptable. With all foster children, the goal is permanency and when children cannot be reunified with their families in a timely way, resource parents will be the first choice for a permanent resource for the child.

Resource families are critical members of the child welfare system with important knowledge, skills and information. Resource families have some of the most challenging and emotionally draining roles in the entire child welfare system. You must be prepared to welcome a new child into your home, manage a wide array of behaviors they present, and cope with agency regulations, policies and paperwork. You are also expected to provide mentoring, support, and aid to families.

In your home, you will serve as parent, counselor, healer, mentor, role model and disciplinarian. Beyond your doors, you will be expected to attend meetings and classes at the agency, school and medical appointments, case reviews and court hearings.

As you strive to fulfill each of these roles, it is also important that you take care of yourself. Make sure you care for your own health and well-being. Seeking support along the way from friends, family members, support groups, other professionals and your own community of faith is also important. As you strive to fulfill each of these roles, it is also important that you take care of yourself. Make sure you care for your own health and well-being. Seeking support along the way from friends, family members, support groups, other professionals and your own community of faith is also important. As you strive to fulfill each of these roles, it is also important that you take care of yourself. Make sure you care for your own health and well-being. Seeking support along the way from friends, family members, support groups, other professionals and your own community of faith is also important. As you strive to fulfill each of these roles, it is also important that you take care of yourself. Make sure you care for your own health and well-being. Seeking support along the way from friends, family members, support groups, other professionals and your own community of faith is also important. As you strive to fulfill each of these roles, it is also important that you take care of yourself. Make sure you care for your own health and well-being. Seeking support along the way from friends, family members, support groups, other professionals and your own community of faith is also important. As you strive to fulfill each of these roles, it is also important that you take care of yourself. Make sure you care for your own health and well-being. Seeking support along the way from friends, family members, support groups, other professionals and your own community of faith is also important.
Legal Responsibilities

As a resource parent you must meet and comply with certain legal and regulatory requirements. Some of these responsibilities include:

• Obtain your foster care license and participate in the annual evaluations to renew your approval. This evaluation will be conducted by your foster care agency. The agency will ensure that you provide all legal and medical clearances and that your home meets the safety and space standards required for children and youth in foster care. In particular, you must pass Childline (child abuse) and criminal clearances. It is important to remain in close communication with your foster care agency throughout this process and to complete all necessary paperwork and keep all appointments. If you have questions about any step of the process, do not hesitate to ask your Resource Parent Support Worker.

• Review, adhere to and sign policy statements related to the discipline of children and youth in foster care, confidentiality, furnishing and use of tobacco, firearms and other policies as required by Pennsylvania State Regulations and Philadelphia regulations and policies. Many of these documents are written in legal language and may be confusing. Do not be afraid to ask for an explanation or clarification before signing any documents. Review them from time to time to be sure that you and others in your household are complying with the requirements.

• Attend, participate in and successfully complete all training requirements for foster families. Your foster care agency can explain these requirements to you and provide options for when and how to complete them. Do not let this training requirement become a barrier to you. Training can be offered in different ways and at different times and locations, so be sure to discuss your particular needs, concerns and requests with your agency.

• Resource parents must also complete training on child abuse reporting. This can be completed online at www.reportabusepa.pitt.edu. Your certifying agency can also help you obtain this training.

• Make sure that your home (and vehicle if you have one) continue to meet all of the standards necessary for ensuring the safety needs of children at each age and developmental stage. See Appendix One, Safety Checklist, on page 59 for individual items.

• Keep the foster care agency informed of any changes in your circumstances such as job or housing changes, the addition of new family members, including older children returning home from college or other settings, significant health changes or legal convictions of yourself or any member of your household. State regulations say that you may not have more than six children under the age of 18 living in your home. This includes all children: birth, foster and adopted, but a waiver can be requested.
• Maintain the privacy and confidentiality of the child and family. The child, family, and other individuals with whom you work and others on the team will share important information with you about their lives and circumstances. As a resource parent, you are required to keep all of this information confidential. You may not discuss the child’s or family background with your neighbors, friends, relatives or others. It is important to know that this confidentiality requirement is part of State and Federal law. Violating the child’s or family right to confidentiality could result in legal action against you. If you have any questions about what information you can appropriately share with teachers, doctors, or others involved with the child, be sure to check with the CUA Case Manager before you proceed.

Financial Considerations and Resources for Resource Parents

Resource parents are responsible for providing all of the child’s daily living needs, including food, shelter, clothing, transportation and other normal expenses.

Remember, always discuss any questions or concerns you have about your financial needs, as you provide care to children and youth in your home, with your Resource Parent Support Worker. There are several financial resources to help you meet the needs of foster children in your care.

Contact information, including phone numbers and websites for all of the agencies mentioned here, are included in the resource directory at the end of this handbook.

Foster Care Payment: The foster care payment is provided to you for the care of the child. Provider agencies usually issue checks on a monthly basis. The amount is based on the level of care appropriate and approved for a particular child or youth. The payment for youth 13 and older is greater.

Clothing: An initial clothing allowance for a child or youth you may be requested only once. Ask your Resource Parent Support Worker about your agency’s reimbursement policy. After that, it is your responsibility to provide seasonal and age-appropriate clothing with the foster care payment you receive.

Medical Verification Report, or MVR, with the child’s medical coverage information for the specific provider. Be sure to follow up if you do not receive this information immediately when the child is placed in your home. When possible, maintaining the child in the same HMO and Primary Care Physician is beneficial to the child and family.

Mental/Behavioral Health Services: There is considerable evidence that intellectual disability and drug and alcohol treatment are provided to children and youth in foster care in Philadelphia through Community Behavioral Health Services (CBH) and through similar providers in other areas. CBH assists DHS in accessing appropriate services for children and youth as they enter care, which means a child should already be connected to such services before entering your home unless you are receiving an emergency placement. Resource parents should work with the CUA Case Manager to arrange behavioral health services, assessments, treatment services and options, and medications. The CUA Case Manager has primary responsibility for working with youth and resource parents to ensure that the behavioral health needs of children are addressed in a timely and developmentally appropriate manner.

I’d children age up to five in foster care are typically eligible for benefits through the Pennsylvania Medical Assistance Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC). This program provides supplemental foods, infant formulas, nutrition education, and some types of health care.

Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP): Your household may be eligible for SNAP (formerly known as Food Stamps) in addition to the foster care reimbursement. SNAP is provided through the United States Department of Agriculture, and current policy gives resource parents the option of including foster children and foster care payments or not, when making food stamp determinations. Be sure to discuss these provisions with a SNAP case manager when you apply or modify your application in case your decision has an impact on the benefits you or other family members receive.

School Lunch Program: All children in foster care are eligible for free or reduced lunch rates. There is a space on the School Lunch Application to indicate that the child is in foster care. Be sure to mark this box when completing the child’s school lunch program application.

Transportation Reimbursement: Resource parents are responsible for the responsibility of the resource parent and are factored into the monthly foster care payment. If you expect to incur extraordinary or special transportation costs, seek approval and make arrangements through your Resource Parent Support Worker.

Child care: Resource parents who are working or in school are eligible for State subsidies to assist with child care expenses. In some cases, DHS provides interim subsidies for children in foster care. Head Start and PHLpreK programs are available at no cost for children ages 3-5, in addition to foster care. Programs found citywide that provide services before and/or after school care. Your CUA Case Manager can help you explore the options and ensure you receive subsidies for which you are eligible. Child Care Information Services (CCIS) can also provide information about child care options and subsidies. CCIS can be reached at 1-888-461-KIDS (5437) or information about child care centers can be found at philadelphiahealthcare.org. For a searchable listing of afterschool programs, click on Directories on myphilasap.org.

The foster care payment is provided to you for the care of the child. Provider agencies usually issue checks on a monthly basis. The amount is based on the level of care appropriate and approved for a particular child or youth. The payment for youth 13 and older is greater.

School Lunch Program: All children in foster care are eligible for free or reduced lunch rates. There is a space on the School Lunch Application to indicate that the child is in foster care. Be sure to mark this box when completing the child’s school lunch program application.

Out-of-School-Time Programs: All children involved with DHS get priority in DHS funding for before- and after-school and summer camp programs available throughout Philadelphia. Contact DHSOST@phila.gov for more information.

Early Intervention and Other Programs for Children who are Delayed or Differently Abled: A foster child’s development is already negatively affected by the time they enter foster care due to the trauma of abuse and neglect. This section will provide information on where to get help if the child is developing differently than other children their age.

Foster children age five and younger with developmental delays are eligible for Early Intervention at no cost. Early Intervention helps Resource Parents to support the child’s learning and development. If you suspect a child has delays who is under three, you can call Infant Toddler Early Intervention at 215-685-4646. If the child is 3-5 years old, you can call Early Childhood Services, the Preschool Early Intervention Program at 215-222-8054. The Special Kids Network of Pennsylvania offers a helpline to learn about health, educational, recreational, and other programs available for children with special health care needs. Resource parents can call the helpline at 800-986-4550.

After that, it is your responsibility to provide services before entering your home unless you are receiving an emergency placement. Resource parents should work with the CUA Case Manager to arrange behavioral health services, assessments, treatment services and options, and medications. The CUA Case Manager has primary responsibility for working with youth and resource parents to ensure that the behavioral health needs of children are addressed in a timely and developmentally appropriate manner.

WIC: Children up to age five in foster care are typically eligible for benefits through the Pennsylvania Medical Assistance Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC). This program provides supplemental foods, infant formulas, nutrition education, and some types of health care.

Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP): Your household may be eligible for SNAP (formerly known as Food Stamps) in addition to the foster care reimbursement. SNAP is provided through the United States Department of Agriculture, and current policy gives resource parents the option of including foster children and foster care payments or not, when making food stamp determinations. Be sure to discuss these provisions with a SNAP case manager when you apply or modify your application in case your decision has an impact on the benefits you or other family members receive.

School Lunch Program: All children in foster care are eligible for free or reduced lunch rates. There is a space on the School Lunch Application to indicate that the child is in foster care. Be sure to mark this box when completing the child’s school lunch program application.

Out-of-School-Time Programs: All children involved with DHS get priority in DHS funding for before- and after-school and summer camp programs available throughout Philadelphia. Contact DHSOST@phila.gov for more information.

Early Intervention and Other Programs for Children who are Delayed or Differently Abled: A foster child’s development is already negatively affected by the time they enter foster care due to the trauma of abuse and neglect. This section will provide information on where to get help if the child is developing differently than other children their age.

Foster children age five and younger with developmental delays are eligible for Early Intervention at no cost. Early Intervention helps Resource Parents to support the child’s learning and development. If you suspect a child has delays who is under three, you can call Infant Toddler Early Intervention at 215-685-4646. If the child is 3-5 years old, you can call Early Childhood Services, the Preschool Early Intervention Program at 215-222-8054. The Special Kids Network of Pennsylvania offers a helpline to learn about health, educational, recreational, and other programs available for children with special health care needs. Resource parents can call the helpline at 800-986-4550.
Starting out as a Resource Parent

Once you have been approved for foster care and completed the pre-service training, you will be ready to welcome children and youth into your home.

When the agency calls and has a child or adolescent to place with you, you will need a lot of information to help you care for them and meet their needs. Resource parents often say that they wish they had asked more questions before accepting a child or youth into their home. While sometimes there are opportunities for the child to visit you before moving in, this is not always possible.

Even if you are providing kinship care to a child or youth that is related to you, you may not know everything you need to know about the child's needs, including medical care and schooling. It is appropriate and important for you to speak up and request the same information that unrelated resource parents would request when providing care for a child.

Remember that many times, children or youth enter foster care as a result of an emergency. In these situations, the agency may not have had the opportunity to obtain all of the information prior to making a placement. There are times when a small child is found alone (called “abandonment”) and the agency may not even know their name or exact age. The CUA, DHS and the court will work to obtain this information. You should continue to ask questions until you are confident you have all the information you need to effectively care for the child. Often the children and youth themselves will be able to fill in some of the gaps.

Remember, all the information you learn must be kept confidential.

Finally, you always have the right to say “No” to the placement of a particular child or youth in your home. Speak up if you feel concerned about your ability to provide for the child’s safety and well being, while ensuring the safety and well being of other children, youth and family members in your home.

The following checklist provides some of the questions you may wish to ask about any child coming into your home.
PRE-PLACEMENT CHECKLIST

Basic Information
- Child/youth’s name, age, date of birth, gender.
- Child/youth’s race, culture, language.
- Are there special dietary restrictions?
- Child/youth’s religion—will child need access to special religious programs?
- What will make this child/youth feel most at home (food preferences, music, special blanket, stuffed animal or routines)?
- What is most likely to comfort the child when upset or stressed?
- Child/youth’s talents, hobbies, interests.

Health and Development
- Are there issues between the parents I need to understand?
- Are there other relatives involved with the child/youth?
- Are there safety concerns that I should be aware of?
- Do parents have any special needs?

Information Specific to Infants
- What formula is the infant on? Have they started taking any other foods?
- What are their preferred feeding routines?
- Was there a positive toxicology screen or other conditions present at birth for this child?
- Were there any problems with the delivery or birth?
- What was the child’s birth weight?
- Is the child eligible for WIC?
- Has the child received a developmental assessment and are they developing normally?

Information Specific to Adolescents
- Any concerns with the youth’s use of social media?
- Does this youth currently have a job?
- If not, is after-school or summer employment a goal or expectation?
- Does the youth have a driver’s license? If so, what are the requirements around allowing driving?
- Are they receiving any independent living services?
- Are they sexually active? If so, are they using birth control? Do they understand safe sex practices and understand the difference between birth control and safe sex?
- Is this youth a parent? If so, are they parenting the child and if not, who is?
- If the youth is not raising their own child, what arrangements exist for visitation and other involvement with the child? What is their relationship with their child’s other parent?
- Does the youth identify as LGBTQ?
- Do they Vape?
- Do they smoke cigarettes?
- Are there any issues with alcohol or drugs?

Family Information
- Does the child/youth have any siblings?
- Where are they and how can this child/youth stay in contact with siblings?
- What are the expectations regarding visits—who will visit, how often, where will visits be?
- Are both parents involved with the child/youth, if not, why not?

Health and Development
- Does the child/youth have any allergies?
- Is the child/youth on any medications? If yes, for what and what are the instructions? Do you have an immediate and adequate supply?
- Does the child/youth require any special medical devices?
- Are there special food or dietary needs?
- Who is the child/youth’s doctor and do they have any additional specialists?
- When was the child/youth’s last doctor appointment?
- Are all immunizations current? Are there any health or religious concerns related to receiving immunizations?
- What about dental and eye appointments?

Information Specific to Infants
- What formula is the infant on? Have they started taking any other foods? What are their preferred feeding routines?
- Was there a positive toxicology screen or other conditions present at birth for this child?
- Were there any problems with the delivery or birth?
- What was the child’s birth weight?
- Is the child eligible for WIC?
- Has the child received a developmental assessment and are they developing normally? If not, are they receiving special services to assist in overcoming developmental delays?
PRE-PLACEMENT CHECKLIST

The following checklist provides some of the questions you may wish to ask about any child coming into your home.

Emotional/Psychological Needs

☐ Is the child/youth receiving counseling or therapy and will it continue?
☐ What are the most significant emotional challenges?
☐ Are there any special concerns about behavior I need to be aware of?
☐ Has this child/youth been physically or sexually abused or routinely gone without basic needs (food, clothing, shelter)?
☐ Does the child/youth have any particular fears (i.e., of the dark, water, dogs, etc.)?
☐ Does bed wetting or daytime accidents occur?

Educational Information

☐ What grade is the child/youth in?
☐ What school will the child/youth attend and where is it located?
☐ Does the child/youth have special education needs?
☐ If yes, is an Individual Education Plan (IEP) in place?

☐ May I have a copy of the IEP? (An IEP is a written plan for children receiving special education services. The school develops the plan with participation from the child or youth, a parent or caregiver, and others familiar with the child’s educational needs. The IEP, including child-specific goals and accommodations, must be periodically reviewed and updated.)
☐ What are the names and contact information for important teachers, guidance counselors, coaches?
☐ Are there any other educational or school related issues I need to be aware of?
☐ Who is your primary contact at the child’s school if there are any education-related problems?
☐ Is the child/youth involved in any extracurricular activities and if so, how can we arrange for these to continue?
☐ If in high school, is this youth on track for graduation? Preparing for post-secondary education—vocational school, college, etc.?”
☐ Are there pending deadlines related to school applications, SAT’s or other tests, or financial aid that I need to be aware of?

CUA Information

☐ Case manager name and all contact information.
☐ How long has this case manager known this child/youth?
☐ Supervisor name and all contact information.
☐ After hours and crisis contact policy and information.
☐ Child/youth’s attorney name and contact information.

Placement Information

☐ Is this the child/youth’s first foster care placement?
☐ Why is the child/youth coming into foster care?
☐ If not the first placement, why is the child/youth moving at this time?
☐ What has the child/youth been told? Do they understand why they are being moved?
☐ How long and/or how many times has the child/youth been in foster care?
☐ Does the child/youth have any special belongings or items of sentimental value?
☐ Does this child/youth have a lifebook? (See page 38 for more information on lifebooks.)
☐ Has the child/youth written their own “profile”—information they want shared with my family about themselves?
☐ What information about our family has the child/youth requested?
Helping a Child Adjust to Your Home

When a child or youth comes into your home, they are adjusting to many changes and may also be coping with the effects of trauma related to abuse, neglect and separation from their parents and other family members. We will discuss the resource parent’s role in helping children and youth with feelings and behaviors related to loss, grief, and anger.

However, when a child or youth first enters your home, they may still be experiencing shock. They may also be overwhelmed by the sudden changes in their life and frightened at the prospect of coping with so many new people and situations.

The better a resource parent understands the various emotions, physical, and behavioral approaches children and youth may exhibit during this transition, the less likely the child will have to be moved yet again. Here are some things you can do in the early days of a placement to help ease this adjustment period:

- Be sure the child or youth has a place to keep personal and private things.
- Be sure that the rules and expectations in your home are clear. One approach may be to post written rules in a common area (bulletin board, refrigerator) and to review them from time to time.
- Give the child opportunities to talk, without prying.
- Speak of the child’s family using positive language and support and reinforce their relationship with family members.
- Expect and allow for regression in developmental tasks and skills. For example, a toddler that was toilet trained may revert to needing diapers; a pre-adolescent may begin sucking their thumb.
- Show personal interest in each child. Try to draw out and encourage participation in their hobbies, favorite activities, television shows, music, games, books, and provide opportunities to do the things they enjoy and do well.
- Be conscious of how your own family routines may appear to the child. Some behaviors can be misinterpreted by people that are new to your family.
- If a child has a history of sexual abuse, be particularly careful about displays of affection, or assistance with personal hygiene. Touching that would be perceived as innocent or normal in most circumstances can be frightening or misinterpreted to a child that has been sexually abused. Talk to your CUA Case Manager about appropriate safeguards for your child. For example, it may not be appropriate to bathe two children together.
- Maintain ties to the child’s culture, neighborhood, community, religion, friends, peers and other important linkages in their life through social activities and telephone contact.
- Help familiarize the child with your neighborhood and community.
- Include the child in family outings and activities and begin to include her photographs with other photo displays in your home.
- Demonstrate trust by allowing older, responsible youth to have a key to the house.
- Treat your foster child like other children in your home. Do not distinguish.
- Start, contribute and keep a lifebook up to date. (A description of lifebooks can be found in the next section.)

Keeping Records

As a resource parent, one of your roles is to keep the parents, the CUA and the courts informed about the child’s development, progress, needs, activities and challenges. Keeping clear records will make it easier to provide complete and accurate information when it is needed.

Some of the things you will want to keep records and notes about include:

- Achievements, successes and celebrations.
- School progress, grades, meetings and behaviors.
- Medical appointments, medications, injuries and illnesses.
- Court hearings and what happened at each hearing.
- Contacts with the family, including both parents, siblings, and extended family.
- Contacts with your foster care agency, the CUA Case Manager, and any other service provider.
- Unusual, new or changed behavior patterns or fears.
- Any other information you feel may be relevant.

Your time is precious and keeping records may seem like an added burden. Here are a few tips that may help make it easier to keep the information without demanding a lot of extra time:

- Keep a small notebook with you for jotting things down as they occur rather than waiting until you get a quiet time and space.
- Make notes directly into your appointment calendar.
- Keep a three-ring binder for each youth in your care, and use pocket-folder inserts to collect papers and forms from schools, doctors, therapists, etc.

Lifebooks

Many people enjoy looking at pictures from their childhood and family experiences through the years. Sharing pictures leads to sharing stories and through this process we gain a sense of understanding of our roots. Without these pictures and stories, we might feel disconnected and lost. Children in foster care need links that help them to connect their past, present and future. A lifebook is one tool that can help provide these links.

A lifebook is like an expanded version of a child’s photo album and history. It is an account of their life conveyed in words and pictures. It is both a privilege and a responsibility for resource parents to help create or build upon the lifebooks of the foster children in their homes.

Lifebooks give the child something unique that is part of them that they can turn to when in need of reassurance or understanding. Lifebooks also serve as an ongoing, continuous record that links the various changes, moves and people that have been part of their life. The book provides graphic evidence of being cared for and says: “You and what you do are valuable.”

A lifebook can also help a child prepare for the process of moving towards permanence. It provides a tool for open communication and sharing between the resource parent and child or youth, which can also be shared with family and/or adoptive family members in the future.

Your child’s CUA Case Manager can refer your child to a service called “Child and Parent Preparation,” in which a specialized social worker will come to your home and help the child create a lifebook. If you or your foster child is interested in this type of support, speak to your CUA.
What to include in a Lifebook

If your foster child does not already have a lifebook started, you can begin one for her. While each book will be different, reflecting the unique history of a child’s life, most lifebooks include:

• Birth information.

• Child’s “family tree” including: names, addresses and personal descriptions of parents, some description of their personalities, special talents, educational background, information on the child’s siblings, aunts, uncles, grandparents and other relatives.

• Placement record including names, addresses and dates of all foster and other placements the child has experienced.

• Educational history: All schools attended and any important academic achievements.

• Medical history including immunizations.

• Names and addresses of all social service agencies and case managers involved with the child and/or their family.

• Letters and mementos from parents or relatives.

• Birthday and holiday cards.

• Pictures of the child at various ages. Photos of family and/or foster families. Pictures of any other significant people in their life.

• Photos of friends, houses lived in and schools attended over the years.

• Drawings or schoolwork by the child over the years.

• Award certificates or certificates of participation or completion (i.e. Little League, Church Choir, etc.).

The lifebook materials can be collected in a photo album, folder, notebook or even a special box, perhaps decorated by the child.

Visits with Family

Visits with the child’s biological family are important to their sense of stability and well being while in foster care, and are a critical element to their successful reunification. State regulations require that foster children be permitted to visit their parents and/or family members. The frequency and other details will be discussed with your CUA Case Manager and included in all written case plans.

The schedule of visits may become more frequent in preparation for returning a child to the family. Visits may include the child’s parents, other family members, and siblings. A visitation plan is usually decided jointly by the CUA Case Manager, the child or youth’s family, and other members of the child’s extended family. It is common for Family Court judges to make orders concerning the frequency and other details of visits, as well as whether visits may be supervised or unsupervised.

As a resource parent, you can play an important role during visits and may be asked to host visits in your home. You will be able to support and nurture the child and family as they work toward restoring their relationship. There may be times when this role is difficult for the resource parent. Children become upset or acts out before or after visits. These are natural reactions for many children, and resource parents may need to seek guidance and support to help a child through these times. One idea might be to work with your CUA Case Manager to develop a set of guidelines for dealing with difficult situations. However, challenges are not valid reasons to discourage or discontinue visits. In fact, no one is ever asked to discontinue visits except the judge.

Discipline

Disciplinary measures of foster children is NOT permitted. Types of punishment which are NOT allowed can include, but are not limited to, any of the following types of punishments:

• Spanking, slapping or other forms of hitting with hands or any other instruments.

• Any form of punishment that inflicts pain.

• Use of restraints or isolating a child in a closet or other inappropriate space.

• Denial of meals or other basic needs.

In rare circumstances, for example, when there are safety concerns about a parent, the court may order a period of time. Or, if the parent’s legal rights to a child or youth have been terminated in Family Court, they no longer have legal rights to continue to see her.

Even in these circumstances, there may be other family members, such as siblings or grandparents, that still have needs or wants to stay in contact with.

As a resource parent, your role is to help the child maintain the important connections in their life.

Visits with Family

• Verbal abuse or ridicule, or threats of removal from the home.

• Denial of planned visits, phone calls or other contact with family members.

• Assignment of excessive or inappropriate chores or work.

• Punishment for bed-wetting or actions relating to toilet training.

• Allowing children to discipline other children.

• Denial of any component of the child’s Single Case Plan.

For helpful strategies around discipline and structure for youth, consult with your CUA Case Manager or Resource Parent Support Worker.

Becoming an Advocate

One of the best ways you can help yourself and the children or youth placed in your home is by developing advocacy skills. You are your own advocate and you will have a special responsibility to become the child’s primary advocate as well. You also have an important role in helping children and youth become effective self-advocates.

One way to develop advocacy skills is to join with other resource parents. The resource directory in this handbook provides information for parent and grandparent support organizations in Philadelphia and beyond. Here are some other important advocacy strategies:

• Ask lots of questions and be as informed as possible about the youth in your care, their needs, the process and procedures you must follow and the services you and they are receiving.

• Build positive, professional relationships with the other members of the youth’s team.

• Be respectful, be clear and pleasant when speaking to others. Learn names and communicate often with the other partners in the child’s life.

• Be organized. Keep good records, keep a log of phone calls, keep copies for yourself of all materials, forms, documents, reports, etc.

• Be available. Always return phone calls, and keep appointments. If you must miss an appointment, call ahead to schedule. If an emergency prevents this, call as soon as possible.

• One of the best ways you can help yourself and the children or youth placed in your home is by developing advocacy skills. You are your own advocate and you will have a special responsibility to become the child’s primary advocate as well. You also have an important role in helping children and youth become effective self-advocates.

One way to develop advocacy skills is to join with other resource parents. The resource directory in this handbook provides information for parent and grandparent support organizations in Philadelphia and beyond. Here are some other important advocacy strategies:

• Ask lots of questions and be as informed as possible about the youth in your care, their needs, the process and procedures you must follow and the services you and they are receiving.

• Build positive, professional relationships with the other members of the youth’s team.

• Be respectful, be clear and pleasant when speaking to others. Learn names and communicate often with the other partners in the child’s life.

• Be organized. Keep good records, keep a log of phone calls, keep copies for yourself of all materials, forms, documents, reports, etc.

• Be available. Always return phone calls, and keep appointments. If you must miss an appointment, call ahead to schedule. If an emergency prevents this, call as soon as possible.
Among your responsibilities:

- Children and youth in foster care receive a thorough physical examination within 60 days of placement into care. In addition, children over the age of three must also have a dental exam in that same period of time. After these initial exams, children must continue to have physical exams once per year and dental exams once every nine months. Infants up to 23 months must be seen by a doctor on a more frequent schedule—once every six weeks for the first six months of life, and once every three months from seven to 23 months. Of course, children in foster care must also be taken to the doctor whenever there is a need for treatment of an illness or injury. Adolescents in foster care should also have access to appropriate gynecological and reproductive health care services. All of these health visits must be documented for the case file.

- Screenings and assessments for children under 3 with these conditions.

- Community Supports coordinate ChildLink and Partnership for Medical Care of Eastern Pennsylvania’s Early Intervention program. It is important to be particularly aware of developmental delays in very young children, which may have required multiple and/or lengthy hospital stays.

- Other complex health care needs that are not limited to:
  - Progressive neurological disorder.
  - Down or other syndromes typically associated with developmental delays.
  - Chronic health care needs that may have required multiple and/or lengthy hospital stays.
  - Technology dependent infants and toddlers.
  - Social-emotional conditions include:
    - Appears to be emotionally withdrawn.
    - Flat emotional presentation (never happy or angry).
    - Feeding problems, for example, shoves food in their mouths to point of choking, is never full, hoards food.
    - Other complex health care needs that are not limited to:
      - Delays in reaching developmental milestones related to speech, motor skills, etc.
      - History of admission to a Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU).
      - Failure to thrive (FTT).
      - Feeding problems, for example, shoves food in their mouths to point of choking, is never full, hoards food.
      - Has frequent nightmares.
      - Is fearful.
      - Often irritable.
      - Presents with sexualized behaviors.
      - Aggression.

- Developmental Screening from ChildLink.

- All foster children under 3 in Philadelphia are eligible to receive Regular Developmental Screening from Childlink or Partnership for Community Supports. These agencies will provide Early Intervention if a concern is identified during screening. Resource parents are expected to participate in these developmenal screenings and services, which are provided in their own homes, to set young children on a path to success.
When a child is first placed in your home

Keep Child in Same School
• Children in foster care should remain in their school of origin (school they attended before being placed in care) unless it is decided that it is not in their best interests to do so.
• It is up to DHS and the school district, with the input of others, to determine what school is in the child’s best interest. This decision is made at a meeting called a Best Interest Determination (BID) Conference.

Requirements for School Enrollment
If the child needs to enroll or re-enroll in school, make sure you bring the following with you:
• The child
• A letter with details about the child’s placement (should be on DHS or CUA letterhead).
• This letter should include:
  • Youth is in legal custody of DHS
  • Placement address and date of placement
  • Resource parent name & contact information
  • Assigned CUA team name & contact information
  • Your photo ID
• If receiving special education bring a copy of their Individualized Education Plan (IEP) if available to you.
• If mentally gifted bring their evaluation form from the previous school if available to you.

Obtain the Child’s Records
• Case managers can ask for school records and can share educational information with foster parents.
• If foster parents are acting as the child’s Education Decision Maker, they have the right to obtain the child’s educational records like report cards, transcripts, IEPs, etc.

Resolving Special Education Issues/Consents
• Biological/adoptive parents who are attempting to act on their child’s behalf, get to sign and decide their child’s educational needs.
• If the school determines the biological/adoptive parents are not responding or available to make decisions about the child’s educational needs, the school will set up meetings with the foster parents who are then able to make decisions for the child, including signing IEPs and requesting evaluations.
• Even if the biological/adoptive parents remain involved in the child’s education, the foster parents should be included in the educational process for the child. The school can and should involve anyone who has knowledge of the child to IEP meetings; you may need to introduce yourself and make a request to be included by the school.
• If the Court appoints someone as Education Decision Maker for the child, this person is the final decision maker. This overrides biological/adoptive parents or foster parents.

Best Practice Tips
• Introduce yourself to the child’s teachers and counselors and explain your relationship to the child so that you can help support their behavioral and educational needs.
• Attend parent teacher conferences.
• Encourage taking the PSATs or SATs.
• Read to them or encourage that they read themselves (depending on their age).
• Involve them in school activities that are of interest to them.
• Make their appointments AFTER SCHOOL (for example: doctor, therapy, etc.).
• Notify school when children are out sick.

For Teens and Parents
Teen parents are eligible for free childcare through the DHS Childcare Eligibility Unit (CCEU), to allow them to pursue their education.

HAVING TROUBLE?
Talk to your CUA team about getting assistance from the DHS Education Support Center.

Supports include but not limited to tutoring, counseling, transfers, re-enrollments, high school selection process, bullying issues, IEP requests.

Did you know?
The Commissioner’s Action Response Office (CARO) responds to individuals who have questions, concerns, or complaints about any services provided by the Department of Human Services or its contracted providers, including Community Umbrella Agencies (CUAs).

215-683-6000 dhscario@phila.gov

Educational Needs of Children and Youth in Foster Care

Long-term research shows that children and youth in out-of-home placements have double the dropout rates compared to their peers. It is important to be involved in your foster child’s education to help ensure stability, continuity and success!

Children in foster care have double the dropout rates compared to their peers. It is important to be involved in your foster child’s education to help ensure stability, continuity and success!

Teen parents qualify for childcare funding through the DHS Childcare Eligibility Unit (CCEU), to allow them to pursue their education.
Preparing Other Kids in the Family For Becoming a Foster Family

Here are a few tips on preparing children already in the family for the arrival of new foster children into the home.

• Start reading books together about foster care.
• Find out what fears your child may have about the new children coming into the home. For example, children may worry that you will place them into foster care, that they will lose their special time with you, or that they will have to give up their room. These are real issues that you must address with each child individually.

• Respect each child’s need for some private space. If they cannot each have their own room, then make sure they each get some special private space such as a footlocker that locks or a shelf in a closet.
• Let them create their own versions of the lifebooks discussed on page 39.

Preparing Your Relatives for Your Role as a Resource Parent

• Be honest about your plans, your motivations and your expectations.
• Although it may be hard to do, consider asking for, and genuinely listening to, the advice of extended family members.
• Include extended family members, if possible, in your preparation for resource parenting.
• Sometimes problems occur within families when grandparents and other extended family members do not have time to process their own feelings, and are suddenly thrust into a new role as grandparents of a child not biologically related to them. Just as you need time to prepare, so do they. Don’t assume a first reaction is a final one. Reading about the issues and looking at pictures of real foster families can help ease them into their new role.
• Encourage grandparents and others to attend resource parent support group meetings and conferences, picnics, or other gatherings where they will be able to see and interact with (or just sit back and quietly observe) other foster families.
• If you are part of a support group, consider sponsoring a “Grandparents’ Night.”

• Discuss foster care terminology and confidentiality.
• Remember, the child has an extended family too. Include grandparents and other relatives in your extended family circle.

What Children and Youth in Foster Care Want You to Know

Foster youth who have been interviewed about their experiences expressed the following:

There is a lack of stability in our lives. Some of our experiences are:
• Changing foster homes unexpectedly.
• Changing schools constantly.
• Always losing friends and needing to make new ones.
• Having to adapt to new communities and environments.
• Always getting new case managers.
• Always getting new therapists.

• Here is what we recommend:
  • If we have to move, tell us why.
  • Don’t let resource parents pack our stuff without our permission.
  • Resource parents need better training. Foster youth could help train resource parents.
  • Don’t let foster parents tell other people, even relatives, about our background or the things they read in our life.
  • Don’t read our files and think you know us.
  • We need to be more involved in all the decisions affecting our lives.
  • Inform us of our rights; about our case; of our court dates and the purpose of each hearing; who our attorney is and how to reach them.
  • Communicate with us. There needs for better communication between foster youth, resource parents and case managers.
  • Train teachers and counselors about foster care.
  • Let me practice my religion, no matter what it is.
  • Help us stay in touch with our family and siblings.
  • Help us with our problems; don’t just medicate us.
  • Give us positive encouragement; stress what can be done and help us do it.
  • Treat us like you’d treat your own children.
  • Treat us with respect, like we are of importance.
  • Respect our cultural and family values.
  • Don’t expect us to be perfect.
  • Encourage our goals, no matter how realistic they may seem.
  • Don’t assume anything is unrealistic.
  • Foster our dreams.

Your Role in Helping Children and Youth Make Transitions from Foster Care

Resource parents can contribute to successful transitions of children and youth from foster care. Moving from a foster home is often emotionally difficult for the child or youth and they will need support to get through it. It can also be a difficult time for resource parents, their families, and their friends.

Youth Make Transitions from Foster Care Want You to Know

Foster youth who have been interviewed about their experiences expressed the following:

• Talking with the child or youth about all the plans and specific steps involved in the move.
• Involving the child and their parents, prospective adoptive parents, kin or other caregivers in planning how the move will occur.
• Explaining the details of any court appearances during the transition time.
• Communicating with the CUA Case Manager, Resource Parent Support Worker, parents and caregivers about how the child or youth is handling the transition.
• Planning a special way to celebrate the time the child was with the foster family.
• Updating the lifebook to include information and pictures of your home.
• Preparing for grieving behaviors in the child or youth, as well as in other members of your family.
• Speaking positively about the family or placement to which the child is moving.
• Sharing information such as any issues or concerns, progress, milestones and a concrete transition plan for the educational stability and continuity.
Parenting a Youth with Special Medical Needs or Disabilities

A recent study indicates that there are about 10 million children in the United States with a chronic health care condition and about 4 million of them have a health condition that interferes with normal childhood activity. When you are preparing to become a resource parent, the agency may ask you if you are willing to take a child with special health care needs or disabilities. Before responding, here are some things to think about:

• There are special needs that each one of us can easily handle, some that we can learn to handle, and some that we are not suited to handle. The key is figuring out which is which.

• The special needs you may be suited to handle are conditions you are familiar with or have experienced in your own home, with family members or in your workplace. For example, you may have had a relative who had asthma as a child, or who needed a leg brace to walk. You may know individuals who are deaf or who may have learning disabilities. Make a list of all medical conditions and disabilities you have some experience with. You might be surprised how long your list is.

• Read about some of the conditions, learn more and determine if you can incorporate these adjustments into your daily routine. In addition, think about if your home can be made wheelchair accessible? Your bathroom?

Common Conditions Children in Foster Care May Present:
You will hear many different medical and psychological terms as workers discuss the needs of specific children and youth in your care. Look them up, read, ask your family doctor and other resource parents about them. The more you learn, the less intimidating the condition will sound.

A short list of the most common developmental disorders and/or disabilities among children and youth in foster care include:

• Developmental delays or lags
• Fetal alcohol damage
• Pre-natal drug exposure
• Down’s Syndrome
• Cerebral Palsy
• Speech delays and disabilities
• Hearing and vision problems
• Allergies, asthma, and related difficulties
• Birth defects correctable with surgery
• Enuresis (bed-wetting) or encopresis (soiling)

When you have a child with special health care needs or disabilities in your home, you will need to become comfortable dealing with the medical community, as well as learning to care for the child in the home setting. Your role may also include teaching the child's parents how to care for these special needs in preparation for reunification. If the child is to be adopted by a family other than yours, or moved to the home of a permanent legal custodian, you may play a similar role, teaching and mentoring the new family in caring for this child’s unique needs. Finally, as children grow older, they will need help learning how to manage their own health care needs.
Caring for the Child in Your Home

There are several special considerations when caring for a child or adolescent with special physical or medical needs in your home.

• Be sure you know how to use any special equipment she has and who to call in case of a malfunction or other equipment problems.

• Learn how to administer any medications she receives, and also learn who is allowed to administer them. For example, in most cases, you will not be able to allow another child, even a responsible older teenager, to give medications to a child.

• Be aware of how the medical condition affects night-time care and sleep routines. Will someone need to check on the child during the night? Do they have special equipment she has and who to call in case of a malfunction or other equipment problems.

• Be aware of any food or dietary restrictions the child has and be sure that anyone who may offer meals or snacks to her understands these issues.

• Discuss the child’s special needs with her and other members of the family and help them develop responses to questions they might receive at school, church or in the community.

Supporting a Youth Living with Special Needs

Children and youth with special needs may be fearful of or have concerns or questions about doctors or hospitals and may need preparation and support for coping with medical appointments and procedures. You can work with the CLA Care Manager, Resource Parent Support Worker, parents and/or therapists to help prepare a youth for each doctor or hospital visit. Some of the more common fears children experience are:

• Separation from parents, siblings and home environment while receiving medical care.

• Pain.

• The doctor’s mannerisms may be scary.

• The unknown.

• Guilt—“I caused my illness.”

In addition, adolescents may have some of the following concerns:

• Being talked down to or treated disrespectfully by medical professionals.

• Loss of privacy.

• Missing school, work or extracurricular activities for medical reasons.

• Impact of medical challenges on developing sexuality and relationships.

• Managing medical needs when on a job, traveling away from home or at college.

There are many ways resource parents can help youth through these fears, including:

• Explain purpose of all visits and/or interventions.

• Tell the child what to expect. If age appropriate and helpful, consider role playing with dolls and/or books.

• Involve the youth in the process ahead of time by gathering information to bring to the doctor, writing out questions to ask the doctor, taking a tour of medical facilities, etc.

• Teach the youth specific self-care and health care management skills so she can take confidence when away from home.

• Include the youth respectfully in all conversations and decision making when meeting with doctors and other medical providers.

• Teach the youth in your care how to access health insurance, make appointments, locate specialists and obtain prescriptions.

Older Youth with Special Needs

When a youth with special needs approaches his or her late teens, there are services within the adult community that may become available. If you are caring for a youth with special needs who is 14 or older, there are some special things to be aware of:

• The child’s IEP (Individual Education Plan) must address “transitional” needs, which is the special preparation this youth may need to become independent and self-sufficient in the future.

• The Office of Vocational and Rehabilitation Services can become a resource for the youth in planning for college, vocational school or work.
Parenting a Youth with Special Emotional or Behavioral Health Needs

Many of the same issues, questions and challenges related to caring for a youth with special medical or physical needs also apply to caring for a child or youth with special emotional or behavioral health needs. Some common emotional or behavioral challenges that a youth in foster care may have, include:

- ADHD - Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder
- AD – Attachment Disorder
- ODD – Oppositional-Defiant Disorder
- Depression, Mood disorders.
- PTSD – Post-traumatic Stress Disorder (from abuse).

Factors that can cause or contribute to emotional or behavioral health need include:

- A history of abuse—physical, sexual or verbal/psychological.
- Attachment disorders.
- Severe grief reactions to the separation from or loss of family.
- Psychiatric/chemical disorders.
- A history of neglect—routinely or consistently being deprived of basic needs.

Red Flags

Following is a list of possible “red flags” that may indicate a need for outside resources. Please keep in mind that all youth are likely to display some of these behaviors at various times. The need for intervention is recommended if the child or youth displays several at once, or over long periods of time.

- Things that happened to the child/youth:
  - Severe illness, or forced separation from primary caregivers in the first three years of life.
  - Neglect of physical needs, especially during the first two years of life.
  - Physical abuse at any time, but especially during the first two years.
  - Sexual encounters of any kind during childhood.
  - Child witnessed traumatic events, domestic violence, alcoholism or drug-addicted parents, a parental death, a sibling death, a destructive fire, etc.
  - Expressing thoughts, feelings or mental disorders.
  - Difficulty and/or obsession with food, overeating, bingeing, refusal to eat, abnormal eating patterns, etc.
  - sing (left alone for long periods.
  - Child was left alone for long periods.
  - Experiencing hallucinations, delusions, hearing voices or other bizarre behaviors.

- Extreme difficulty with forming peer relationships.
- Frequent bursts of seemingly unexplained anger.
- Expressing thoughts, feelings or behaviors related to suicide.

If you notice that a youth in your care has one of these red flags or even just one that seems to be particularly intense or concerning, talk with the agency caseworker about obtaining a thorough behavioral health assessment or evaluation for her. Then, work with the youth, the CASA Case Management Team, the Resource Support Social Worker and therapist to create and implement a developmentally appropriate treatment plan.
Parenting a Youth Who is Racially or Ethnically Different from You

As a resource parent, you may be called upon to parent a child or youth who is racially or ethnically different from you. While in many ways, day to day life with this youth will be no different than with any other, we live in a society that is often deeply divided by issues of race and we need to be aware of the impact of these social messages including our personal views it can have on the children and youth we care for. As a resource parent, you will want to help each youth in your home feel comfortable and proud of their own heritage, while also being tolerant and accepting of others.

How will trans-racial or trans-ethnic parenting change your family?

Here are some questions to consider:
• What does becoming a trans-racial or trans-ethnic family mean to you?
• How does your extended family feel about people of different races?
• How has your personal experience been with people from diverse backgrounds?
• What stereotypes or prejudices are you and your child or youth familiar with?
• What benefits and advantages do you enjoy in your community due to your race or culture that a child or youth of a different race or culture may not enjoy?
• What do you do to help your child or youth feel comfortable and proud of their own heritage, while also being tolerant and accepting of others?

Development of Identity and Self Esteem in Children and Youth

Parenting a child or youth whose racial and/or ethnic background is different than one or both resource parents presents a variety of issues at different stages of development. Here we discuss some of the issues that might arise at various developmental stages as they relate to racial identity and building of self-esteem:

Pre-School Years
• The people that the child looks up to and spends the most time with look different from her. It will be natural for her to want to resemble those people she loves. Comments such as “When I grow up, I will have blond hair like yours” are not uncommon.
• Think about ways that you and the child can look alike perhaps by some special item of clothing, purse, shoes, or even hair style.
• Provide dolls and books that represent people from diverse backgrounds.

School-Age Years
• The child will need help understanding her heritage and background.
• She needs to be able to begin to develop a response to the question “Who Am I?”
• Celebrate all cultures within the family.
• Point out ways that your individual backgrounds are similar as well as different.
• Acknowledge the prejudices the child faces. Share the feelings prejudice produces. Do not brush these feelings aside.
• Teach problem solving skills and techniques.
• Provide regular opportunities for the child to be among people who do look like or talk like she does—consider school, church, recreational activities, etc.

Adolescence
• This is an intense time of figuring out “Who Am I?” Curiosity about racial identity and background may become stronger, particularly if she has not had the opportunity to know one parent or the extended family representing one side of her heritage.
• Dating issues arise. Look at your community and circle of friends—how many people do you associate with who wholeheartedly accept your son or daughter dating theirs?
• Teens may develop a new or renewed interest in their native land, language, and other opportunities to be among people with the same racial or ethnic background as their own. Ask your agency worker how this might be best accomplished.

Parenting a Youth with Issues Related to Sexual/Gender Orientation

As one might imagine, they are a high risk for various emotional challenges as well as for running away.

While many LGBTQ youth enter foster care for reasons of neglect or abuse similar to other youth in foster care, others enter care specifically because of their sexual orientation issues. They may have been forced to leave their homes as a result of conflict over sexual or gender identity. Or, they may enter the system as a result of problems in school stemming from harassment and discrimination.

As a resource parent, it is important to ensure that all children and youth in your home are both physically and emotionally safe and protected from harassment and discrimination.
Understanding Sexual Orientation

Sexual orientation refers to a person’s sense of self, and sexual attraction to members of the other, same or both sexes. Research indicates that there is a continuum of sexual orientation, with some individuals exclusively attracted to members of the opposite sex, some exclusively attracted to members of the same sex and some in between, attracted to members of both sexes.

Learning about, exploring and awakening to sexual feelings are a normal part of adolescent development. It is also normal for youth to question their own sexual identity and orientation during this period of development and perhaps to experiment with different sexual behaviors.

In addition, youth who have experienced abuse or neglect may have specific sexual behaviors they need for healthy and positive relationships.

There are several things you can do as a resource parent to ensure that these youth are supported in their own efforts to parent youth like themselves. See the LGBTQ Resources in the Resource Directory on page 67.

Providing the Support LGBTQ Youth Will Need

Parenting Youth as They Prepare for Adulthood

For most parents, preparing their children for independence and adulthood is a lifelong task, beginning in early childhood. Each time a parent teaches a child to master a life skill, such as tying shoes, or toilet training, that child is a step closer to a successful life as an independent adult. As children grow into adolescents, this preparation for adulthood takes on a new sense of importance. Parents begin to teach their teens about managing a paycheck, maintaining employment, planning a menu and shopping for groceries, etc. Even when the youth move away from their parents’ home for college, the military, marriage or their first independent apartment, in most cases, they still have access to their parents and other family members for advice, help and financial support, when needed.

Seeking and obtaining a job.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Seeking, obtaining and holding onto a job.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.

Caring for and keeping up personal appearance and grooming.

Managing their own health care, including using public transportation, preparing for healthy sexual relationships.

Seeking and obtaining an apartment.
The home has working smoke detectors. The family practices fire drills.

There are no fire hazards, all electrical cords are in good condition, electrical outlets are plugged with safety caps.

Matches are not accessible to children.

A fire extinguisher is working and easily accessible.

Radiators, hot water pipes, stovetop and fireplaces have covers or barriers that prevent children from getting burned.

Toilets flush and plumbing is in working order. A first aid kit is accessible and well stocked.

Emergency phone numbers are visibly posted. All exits are accessible and free of clutter.

Stairways have guards or railings, are sturdy and well lit.

Windows and screens, are fastened securely to prevent children from falling out.

All medicines are clearly labeled and stored in a locked facility.

Knives, scissors and other sharp objects are kept out of children's reach.

All firearms are equipped with a trigger-lock and stored, uncocked, unloaded, in a locked place that is inaccessible to any youth in the home. Keys to the locked container are also stored in a place that is inaccessible to children and youth in the home. Firearms should not be stored with valuables.

Tools, especially power tools, are stored safely and are not accessible to children.

TVs, VCRs, computers and other equipment are secured on stands to prevent tipping or collapse.

Cleaning agents are stored in original containers and kept out of reach of children.

Infant cribs, playpens and changing tables meet current safety standards.

There are no poisonous plants in the house.

The yard is fenced or otherwise safe for small children.

Equipment and garden tools such as lawnmowers are inaccessible to small children.

There are no pets that can harm a child.

The play area is free of sharp or otherwise dangerous objects.

If yard includes a trampoline or swimming pool, there are barriers that prevent access to unsupervised children.

All play equipment including swings, slides, climbing toys are rust free and in good repair.

Car seats meet current safety standards and weight and age requirements.
Appendix Two: Supporting Children in the recruitment process for a new permanent home

When a resource family is unable to make a permanent commitment to a child in its care, the recruitment agency will begin special efforts to find another permanent home for the child. As part of these efforts the child might be photographed for a photolisting book, newspaper feature or website, participate in a televised recruitment feature such as Wednesday’s child or a “matching party” where children in need of adoptive families meet prospective adoptive parents in a fun, social setting. Below are some tips for helping support the child through this process. You can also discuss this with your CUA Case Manager or Resource Parent Support Worker so that you feel confident about your role and the support you are able to provide.

Before an adoption recruitment event:
- Describe and explain the event to the child.
- Tell her who to expect to be watching if the child is unable to make the trip, such as classmates or teachers if this would be helpful.
- Bring an item to the event that will help the child talk about herself. A favorite book or sports item, a photo album, or something that represents a hobby or talent.
- Talk about being polite, yet being yourself.
- Let her know she does not have to answer every question.
- Remind her not to share information that is too personal—such as her last name, address or school name.
- Don’t forget “Why.” Explain that this is not only an opportunity to meet a family that might become her new family, but it is also a chance to help recruit families for other children who are waiting for a family.
- Enlist the child as a partner in the project. Through her participation, she is helping herself and other children by educating others about children in foster care who need families.
- Talk about how it might feel if friends or schoolmates see the event—offer to come visit their school and talk to classmates or teachers if this would be helpful.
- Discuss this with your agency case manager if adoption is being considered as a child’s permanency plan.
- Keep the child posted about the process, the responses the agency is getting, etc. If there are not a lot of (or any) responses, be reassuring to the child, remind her that it often takes time to find the right family, and provide opportunities for her to express her feelings.
- Role play some of the possible questions that she might be asked—let the youth have a chance to play the role of reporter.
- Work together to make a list of special topics the youth would like to talk about—hobbies, awards, likes and dislikes, favorite song, movie, book or sports item, a trophy or certificate, a homemade craft item, a photo album, etc.
- Let the youth have a chance to play the role of reporter.
- Provide a “de-briefing” opportunity for the child or youth.
- Follow up with the child’s social worker and find out what the next steps are so you can help keep the child informed.

After an event:
- Provide financial assistance to families who adopt children from foster care. This assistance is designed to help the family meet the regular and special needs of the young person. Discuss this with your agency case manager if adoption is being considered as a child’s permanency plan.

Concurrent Planning:
- A process that allows for DHS and the child’s permanency planning team to work on two or more permanency plans at the same time. For example, while primarily focusing on reunifying a child with her parents, the team may also begin to consider and plan for adoption or PLC if reunification is not successful within desired and/or legally required time frames.

Continuance:
- When a court hearing is not completed, it can be “continued” to another date. A continuance may occur when someone whose presence is needed does not come to court, or when the judge does not have sufficient information to act on the case.

Appendix Three: GLOSSARY OF TERMS

While not all-inclusive, this glossary provides definitions of many of the terms used in this handbook and many common terms resource parents may encounter.

Access Card: In Philadelphia, this is another name for the Medicaid program, which provides access to medical care for children in foster care.

Adoption Assistance or Subsidy: Financial assistance available to families who adopt children from foster care. This assistance is designed to help the family meet the regular and special needs of the young person. Discuss this with your agency case manager if adoption is being considered as a child’s permanency plan.

Adjudication or Adjudicatory Hearing: A hearing to determine if the allegations in a petition presented to the court are true.

Aging Out: When a youth leaves foster care because they have reached a certain age (18 in most cases in Philadelphia) without obtaining permanence through returning home, adoption or PLC.

Another Planned Permanent Living Arrangement (APPLA): An alternative permit under Adoption and Safe Families Act (ASFA), that allows a youth to have a permanence goal that is return, home, adoption or PLC. APPLA is not as legally or emotionally secure as the three principle permanency options and least likely to be encouraged or supported by DHS and/or the court.

Appeals: Someone asks for a hearing to change the court’s decision. Any court decision is subject to an appeal.

Child: In this handbook, the terms “child”, “child’s” and “youth” are all used to describe individuals between birth and the age of 18. “Child” is frequently used to describe younger children (birth to age 12) while the term “youth” is frequently used to describe adolescents (ages 12 to 18).

Child Protective Services (CPS): The portion of DHS charged with investigating abuse or neglect allegations and providing ongoing social services to families where abuse and neglect of youth has been reported.

ChildLine: Pennsylvania’s toll-free telephone number—1-800-932-0313—to report suspected abuse or neglect of a child. ChildLine clearance documents that a person has permission as a resource parent—has not been found guilty of abusing a child in Pennsylvania and this clearance is required for resource parent approval.

Commissioner’s Action Response Office (CARO): Responds to questions, concerns or complaints about any services provided by the Philadelphia Department of Human Services or its contracted providers including Community Umbrella Agencies (CUAs).

Department of Human Services: The agency of the City of Philadelphia charged with investigating abuse or neglect allegations and providing ongoing social services to families where abuse and neglect of youth has been reported.

Families Act (AFSA): A law that allows a youth to have a permanence goal that is return home, adoption or PLC. APPLA is not as legally or emotionally secure as the three principle permanency options and least likely to be encouraged or supported by DHS and/or the court.

Foster Care: The legal placement setting for children who cannot safely remain with their parents or guardians.

Guardian: A legal representative appointed by the court to act on behalf of a child who has not the capacity to express his or her wishes.

PLC: Permanent Living Community. An alternative living arrangement to foster care.

Pre-Adoption Agreement: Another Planned Permanent Living Arrangement (APPLA) made with the foster care agency prior to the placement of the child.
Appendix Three: GLOSSARY OF TERMS

Court Appointed Special Advocate (CASA): A volunteer appointed by the court to serve as an arm of the court to independently investigate the best interests of the child and act as a liaison in court proceedings. The CASA and the youth should talk on an ongoing basis.

Dependency Case: This is the term used to describe the court case related to a child in foster care.

DHS: Abbreviation for Department of Human Services, the over-seeing agency for foster care in Philadelphia.

Disposition: This is the decision about where a child or youth should live (such as in state custody), as well as what the parents, DHS and the youth must do to address the problems that brought the youth into care.

Emancipation: A youth who is legally emancipated an adult (by a court) prior to age 18. A youth in foster care who has been approved by the court to have certain legal rights and duties.

Family Court: In Philadelphia, this is the court that hears most cases related to children and youth in foster care. The Family Division, also referred to as Family Court, is one of the three major divisions of the Philadelphia Court of Common Pleas. The Family Division is made up of two branches, the Juvenile Division and the Domestic Relations Division. Most of the court hearings related to children and youth in foster care take place in the Juvenile Division and are referred to as dependency cases.

Family Team Conference: A meeting which brings together a team of people, including the child or youth, her family, foster family, relatives, agency caseworkers, legal advocates and others who care about and/or have information about the child, to develop permanency plans for the child or youth.

Resource Parent/Foster Parent or Foster Family: A parent of a child that has been approved by the State to provide temporary 24-hour care and protection to a child or youth who has been removed from her family, generally for reasons of abuse or neglect. Foster families can be either relatives or non-relatives of the child being placed.

GED: General Equivalency Diploma, a diploma that is equivalent to a high school diploma, which demonstrates that a person has shown satisfactory competence through testing in a variety of subjects such as literacy, math, social and natural sciences.

Guardian ad Litem (GAL): A person appointed by the court to represent the best interests of the child or youth in any legal proceedings involving the youth. The GAL and the youth should talk on an ongoing basis. Guardian, or Guardianship: A person who is not the parent of the child or youth, but has been appointed by the court to have responsibility for the youth including certain legal rights and duties.

Individual Education Plan (IEP): A written plan for children receiving special education services through the schools. The plan is developed with the participation of the child or youth, her parents, the school and others familiar with the child's educational needs. The plan must be periodically reviewed, updated, and must include specific goals and objectives.

Independent Living Program (ILP): An agreement between states to ensure that children who are placed across state lines for adoption are able to receive medical care and medical coverage through Medicaid.

Interstate Compact on Adoption and Medical Assistance (ICAMA): An agreement between states to ensure that children who are placed across state lines for adoption or living with a relative. Both states (“sending state”—the state the child currently lives in, and “receiving state”—the state the child is going to) must complete required paperwork to demonstrate that the legal protections and requirements of the ICPC have been met before a child can be moved across state lines.

Kinship or Kinship Care: A federal and state-funded program of services related to preparation for adulthood, including development of life skills such as money management, job readiness, menu planning and preparation, etc. The federal program also provides funds for college scholarships, and in some cases may provide for room and board assistance for youth over the age of 18.

Independent Living is not a permanency plan for a youth, but rather a set of services related to preparation for adulthood.

Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children (ICPC): An agreement among states to ensure protection and services to children and youth when they are placed across state lines for foster care, adoption or living with a relative. Both states (“sending state”—the state the child currently lives in, and “receiving state”—the state the child is going to) must complete required paperwork to demonstrate that the legal protections and requirements of the ICPC have been met before a child can be moved across state lines.

Kinship or Kinship Care: A 24-hour care for children and youth provided by relatives such as grandparents, aunts, uncles or even older (adult) siblings. This may also be called relative care. In Philadelphia, kinship caregivers are required to be approved by the same standards as non-relative foster parents when providing care for a child in DHS custody.

Mandated Reporter: A person who is designated by law to report suspected abuse or neglect of a minor child. Resource parents, teachers and case managers are just a few of the designated mandatory reporters.

Maintenance Payment: The monthly payment issued to resource parents for the children’s basic needs such as food, clothing, shelter, school supplies, grooming, transportation, and recreation.

Medicaid: A federal and state-funded medical and health care assistance program to which all children in foster care are eligible. In the five-county region, Medicaid is a managed care program called MedicaidChoice. It includes special assessments and services for children under the EPSDT program.

Notice of Hearings: Everyone involved in a youth’s case must be served with a notice telling them when and where court hearings will take place. People required to receive such notice include the youth, parents, resource parents, the agency with custody, and legal advocates assigned to all parties. A resource parent has a right to notice, but is not considered a “party” to the case and therefore, does not have an assigned legal advocate.

Permanent Hearing: A court hearing to consider a child or youth’s need for secure and permanent placement in a timely manner. The hearing must be held within 12 months of a child’s placement in foster care, and revisited thereafter until permanence is achieved.

Resource Parent/Resource Family: Another term for foster or kinship parents/family.

Shelter Care Hearing: The hearing at which the court determines whether it is necessary to place or keep a child in out-of-home care. In Philadelphia, this hearing must be held within 72 hours of a child’s removal from her home.
The Children in Foster Care Act of 2010 guarantees the following rights to children in placement:

• The right to be treated with fairness, dignity, and respect.
• The right to be treated without discrimination based on race, color, religion, disability, national origin, age, and gender.
• The right to be treated without harassment, corporal punishment, unreasonable restraint, or physical, sexual, emotional, and other abuse.
• The right to live in the most family-like setting that meets your needs.
• The right to be given enough food and food of good quality.
• The right to clothing that is clean, seasonal, and age and gender appropriate.
• The right to clothing that is clean, seasonal, and age and gender appropriate.
• The right to be able to stay in the same school when you change placements.
• The right to take part in extracurricular, cultural, and personal enrichment activities.
• The right to have the opportunity to work and develop job skills.
• The right to have contact with your family, and the right to visit your parents at least every other week.
• The right to have contact with your family.
• The right to get life skills training and independent living services.

Appendix Four: Bill of Rights for Children in Foster Care

The Children in Foster Care Act of 2010 guarantees the following rights to children in placement:

• The right to have contact with your family.
• The right to be placed with your siblings, or visit with them at least every other week.
• The right to be placed with your kin and relatives, if possible.
• The right to visit your parents at least every other week.
• The right to be placed with families that have supported you before, if possible.
• The right to have all the contact information for your guardian ad litem, attorney, court-appointed special advocate, and members of your planning team.
• The right to have your case and personal information kept confidential.
• The right to get notices of court hearings for your case, and have the ability to attend the hearings.
• The right to take part in religious services and observances.
• The right to help create and that you can review.
• The right to be placed with your siblings, or visit with them at least every other week.
• The right to take part in developing your medical or mental health treatment plan.
• The right to agree to medical and mental health treatment, including medication.
• The right to visit your parents at least every other week.
• The right to be placed with your siblings, or visit with them at least every other week.
• The right to get all of the medical and mental health services that you need.
• The right to exercise parental and decision-making authority for your child (if you are a parent).

Sibling or Sibling Group: A sibling is the brother or sister of a youth. A sibling group is a group of two or more siblings. DHS’s policy is to keep siblings together when in foster care, and for the purpose of permanency planning.

Single Case Plan: A family-driven plan for the child and family developed in collaboration with all stakeholders. The plan describes the family’s strengths, needs, goals and services, which will help the family address the problems that brought the child into foster care and move towards creating safe permanence for the child in a timely manner.

Supplemental Security Income (SSI): Funding provided through the Social Security Administration (SSA) to eligible children and adults with disabilities.

Surrogate Parent: A person who is appointed by the Department of Education to make sure that a child or youth’s special education needs are being met.

Statewide Adoption Network (SWAN): Pennsylvania’s program for expediting and supporting the adoption of children in foster care.
Appendix Five: Resource Family Care Act

The Office of Children, Youth and Families expects all public and private social service agencies that approve resource families to have in place written protocols that document how the agency insures that the following provisions of the Resource Family Care Act are standardized as part of the agency’s best practice.

• Notification of scheduled meetings to allow resource families to actively participate in planning for the children

• Provision of support services consistent with the child’s permanency plan to assist the resource parents

• Timely, open and complete responsiveness from the agency when contacted by a resource family regarding their role and the care of the children

• Provision of information about the children’s medical, behavioral, family history, education, and placement history

• Consultation with the resource family in developing the child’s permanency plan

• Consultation with the resource family in the decision to release their address to the child’s parent and notification prior to any such release

• Assistance with the coordination of services to the resource family as needed in dealing with the loss of, or separation from a child in their care

• Provision of all written agency procedures related to the resource family roles

• Provision of appropriate training to enhance the skills and performance of the resource family

• Provision of information on how to receive services and reach agency personnel 24/7

• Assurance of confidentiality regarding any abuse allegations made about a resource family household member, as long as such assurance does not compromise the safety of the child

• Provision of the opportunity for resource parents to be heard regarding agency decisions and practices involving the child in their care and assurance that the agency will in no way discriminate or retaliate if resource parents make appropriate inquiry about such decisions or practices

• Inclusion of a resource family, if interested, as an adoption candidate for children whose goal has been changed to adoption

• Assurance that the resource family’s right to be notified of any court proceedings related to the child in their care happens as soon as the agency receives the information

• Assurance that the right of the resource family to be heard during any court proceeding related to the child in their care is preserved and encouraged

• Assurance that no resource parent shall be denied consideration as an adoptive parent solely because the resource family parent cannot be accessed as a resource parent in the future.

For more information on the Resource Family Care Act Contact: The PA State Resource Family Association 1-800-951-5151

Appendix Six: Resource Directory

Adoption

Adoption Center
1500 Walnut St
Suite 701
Philadelphia, PA 19102
215-735-9988; 1-800-TO-ADOPT nac@adopt.org
www.adopt.org
Information, referral and matching services for families in the Delaware Valley area.

AdoptUSKids
605 Global Way, Suite 100
Lawrence, MA 2199
1-888-200-4005
info@adoptuskids.org
www.adoptuskids.org
National photo listing of children awaiting adoption in the U.S. plus adoption information.

North American Council on Adoptable Children (NACAC)
970 Raymond Ave, Suite 106
St Paul, MN 55114
651-644-3036
info@nacac.org
www.nacac.org/
National foster care and adoption information and advocacy.

Statewide Adoption and Permanency Network (SWAN)
1-800-585-SWAN
www.adoptpakids.org/
Information about adoption and waiting children in Pennsylvania.

Together as Adoptive Parents
478 Moyer Road
Harkyesville, PA 19438
215-256-0669
taplink@comcast.net
www.taplink.org/
Support for adoptive, foster and kinship families in Pennsylvania.

Advocacy

Child Welfare League of America (CWLA)
1726 M St NW, Suite 500
Washington, DC 20036
202-688-4200
www.cwla.org
Information on all aspects of child welfare including many excellent books and materials related to foster care.

Public Citizens for Children & Youth (PCCY)
1709 Ben Franklin Parkway, 6th Floor
Philadelphia, PA 19103
215-563-5848
info@pccy.org
www.pccy.org
Advocacy for all children’s issues in the Philadelphia area.

Quality Parenting Initiative (QPI)
1515 Arch St.
Philadelphia, PA 19102
www.phila.gov/dhs
215-683-6375
QPI works to ensure that resource parents have the support and resources they need to help children and youth living in foster care thrive.

Concerns/Complaints

The Commissioner’s Action Response Office (CARO)
215-683-6000
dhscaro@phila.gov
For questions, concerns, or complaints about services provided by DHS or its contracted Providers, including CIUs.

Court and Legal Resources

Juvenile Law Center (JLC)
The Philadelphia Building
1315 Walnut Street, 4th floor
Philadelphia, PA 19107
215-625-0551; 1-800-875-8887
www.jlc.org
JLC provides info and advocacy on laws and issues affecting children in foster care and the juvenile justice system.

National Center for Youth Law
401 14th Street, 15th floor
Oakland, CA 94612
510-835-8098
info@youlaw.org
www.youthlaw.org
Provides information on both juvenile justice and child welfare issues.
The COLOURS Organization, Inc.
1207 Chestnut Street, Suite 910
Philadelphia, PA 19107
215-851-1975
info@coloursorganization.org
www.coloursorganization.org
Support groups and prevention and education programs.

PFLAG Philadelphia
P.O. Box 15711
Philadelphia, PA 19103
215-572-1833
info@pflagphila.org
www.pflagphila.org
Support groups and support and advocacy groups.

Mazzoni Center
1348 Bainbridge Street
Philadelphia, PA 19147
215-563-0652
info@mazzonicenter.org
www.mazzonicenter.org
Free counseling for LGBT youth through the Open Door Program. Provides support for parents with LGBTQ youth and referrals to psychiatric and other psychological services.

Philadelphia Family Pride
P.O. Box 31848
Philadelphia, PA 19104
info@phillyphamilypride.org
www.philadelphiafamilypride.org
Support groups, parenting workshops and educational programs.

Support and advocacy for families facing mental health challenges.

Parents Involved Network
1211 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia, PA 19107
215-751-1800 or 1-800-688-4226
www.nhasp.org
Support for parents or caregivers of children with emotional disorders.

Philadelphia Family Pride
P.O. Box 31848
Philadelphia, PA 19104
info@phillyphamilypride.org
www.philadelphiafamilypride.org
Support groups, parenting workshops and educational programs.

Mental Health Partnerships
1211 Chestnut Street, Suite 1100
Philadelphia, PA 19107
215-751-1800 or 1-800-688-4226
www.nhasp.org
Support and advocacy for families facing mental health challenges.

Parents Involved Network
1211 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia, PA 19107
215-751-1800
www.nhasp.org
Support for parents or caregivers of children with emotional disorders.

The Attic Youth Center
255 South 16th Street
Philadelphia, PA 19102
215-545-4331
info@atticyouthcenter.org
www.atticyouthcenter.org
Counseling groups, after-school programs, free HIV testing and social and educational programming.

Equality Pennsylvania
1211 Chestnut Street, Suite 605
Philadelphia, PA 19107
215-731-1437
info@equalitypa.org
www.equalitypa.org
Advocacy and legal services for gay and lesbian people in Pennsylvania.

The COLOURS Organization, Inc.
1207 Chestnut Street, Suite 910
Philadelphia, PA 19107
215-851-1975
info@coloursorganization.org
www.coloursorganization.org
Support groups and prevention and education programs.

PFLAG Philadelphia
P.O. Box 15711
Philadelphia, PA 19103
215-572-1833
info@pflagphila.org
www.pflagphila.org
Support groups and support and advocacy groups.

Mazzoni Center
1348 Bainbridge Street
Philadelphia, PA 19147
215-563-0652
info@mazzonicenter.org
www.mazzonicenter.org
Free counseling for LGBT youth through the Open Door Program. Provides support for parents with LGBTQ youth and referrals to psychiatric and other psychological services.

Philadelphia Family Pride
P.O. Box 31848
Philadelphia, PA 19104
info@phillyphamilypride.org
www.philadelphiafamilypride.org
Support groups, parenting workshops and educational programs.

Mental Health Partnerships
1211 Chestnut Street, Suite 1100
Philadelphia, PA 19107
215-751-1800 or 1-800-688-4226
www.nhasp.org
Support and advocacy for families facing mental health challenges.

Parents Involved Network
1211 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia, PA 19107
215-751-1800
www.nhasp.org
Support for parents or caregivers of children with emotional disorders.

Support and advocacy for families facing mental health challenges.

Parents Involved Network
1211 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia, PA 19107
215-751-1800
www.nhasp.org
Support for parents or caregivers of children with emotional disorders.

The COLOURS Organization, Inc.
1207 Chestnut Street, Suite 910
Philadelphia, PA 19107
215-851-1975
info@coloursorganization.org
www.coloursorganization.org
Support groups and prevention and education programs.

PFLAG Philadelphia
P.O. Box 15711
Philadelphia, PA 19103
215-572-1833
info@pflagphila.org
www.pflagphila.org
Support groups and support and advocacy groups.

Mazzoni Center
1348 Bainbridge Street
Philadelphia, PA 19147
215-563-0652
info@mazzonicenter.org
www.mazzonicenter.org
Free counseling for LGBT youth through the Open Door Program. Provides support for parents with LGBTQ youth and referrals to psychiatric and other psychological services.

Philadelphia Family Pride
P.O. Box 31848
Philadelphia, PA 19104
info@phillyphamilypride.org
www.philadelphiafamilypride.org
Support groups, parenting workshops and educational programs.

Mental Health Partnerships
1211 Chestnut Street, Suite 1100
Philadelphia, PA 19107
215-751-1800 or 1-800-688-4226
www.nhasp.org
Support and advocacy for families facing mental health challenges.

Parents Involved Network
1211 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia, PA 19107
215-751-1800
www.nhasp.org
Support for parents or caregivers of children with emotional disorders.
Other Community Resources

Philadelphia Department of Human Services
1515 Arch Street
Philadelphia, PA 19102
215-683-4DHS (4347)
215-PARENTS (727-3687)
www.phila.gov/dhs

DHS works to protect children from abuse, neglect, and delinquency and to ensure their safety and permanency in nurturing home environments.

Grand Central Inc
1211 Chestnut Street
Suite 200
Philadelphia, PA 19107
215-557-1554
grandcentralinc@msn.com

Resources and support for grandparents and other relatives raising children.

Resource Parenting
Fostering Families Today
www.fosteringfamilystoday.com
A quarterly magazine for foster, kinship and adoptive parents in Philadelphia.

Special Needs
ChildLink
1501 Cherry Street
Philadelphia, PA 19102
[Call for meeting locations]
267-532-8512
philadephiaRPA@gmail.com

Supportive organization for foster, kinship and adoptive parents in Philadelphia.

Sexual Health
Planned Parenthood of Southeastern PA
1144 Locust Street
Philadelphia, PA 19107
215-351-5500
www.plannedparenthood.org/

Information, evaluations, services and referrals for children from birth to age three who have developmental delays or disabilities, and their families living in Philadelphia.

Elynn
111 Elynn Road
Elynn, PA 19063
610-891-2000
www.elynn.org

Services for infants and toddlers who show evidence of or are at risk for lags in physical, cognitive, language, speech and psycho-social development. Individual or group educational and therapeutic services are offered at either the center or in the community depending on the identified needs of the child and family.

Family Voices
P.O. Box 37188
Albuquerque, NM 87176
505-872-4747
Toll Free: 888-835-5669
http://www.familyvoices.org

A national, non-profit, family-led organization promoting quality health care for all children, and particularly those with special health care needs.

Youth Matters Philly
www.youthmattersphilly.org
This app is designed to help Philly youth find and access local resources, like shelters, housing, foodbanks, healthcare providers, and more.

Trans-racial Resources PACT: An Adoption Alliance
410-243-9460
info@pactadopt.org
www.pactadopt.org
Information for parenting children of color through foster care or adoption.