TENANT SCREENING GUIDELINES

Sections 9-1108(3) and (4) and Section 9-810 establish the following regulations pertaining to applicant screening guidelines and process for prospective tenants.

1

Before accepting an application or application fee for rental housing, landlords must provide the applicant with the written or electronic uniform screening criteria.

2

The Uniform Screening Criteria should not include any of the prohibited screening criteria established in Section 9-810.

3

If a landlord rejects an application, within three business days of the rejection, they must provide a written or electronic statement of reasons for the rejection and include copies of any third-party reports the landlord relied on.

4

After receiving notice of rejection, a rejected tenant has 48 hours to notify the landlord of their intent to dispute or request reconsideration of the denial, and seven business days to provide evidence of (1) incorrect, inaccurately attributed, or prohibited information, or (2) mitigating circumstances related to the grounds for denial.

5

If a rejected applicant disputes information or seeks reconsideration, and provides information that demonstrates their ability to satisfy the requirements of tenancy, the landlord must offer to the rejected applicant the landlord's next available dwelling unit of comparable size and rental price if the landlord owns five or more rental units in the City of Philadelphia.

NEW REQUIREMENT

Section 9-1108(3) and (4) establish the guidelines for use of the following information in rental screening:

1. Rental history
2. Credit history and credit score

REMINDER

Section 9-810 should not be read as an exclusive list of the criteria that must apply for your property. Landlords are still required to establish screening criteria for prospective tenants that adhere to the guidelines established in this section.

Section 9-810 does not prevent or preclude landlords from utilizing less restrictive screening criteria.

DISPUTING INFORMATION AND REQUESTING RECONSIDERATION OF DENIAL : RENTERS' STEP-BY-STEP

After an applicant receives notice that their rental application has been denied, they have the right to (1) dispute information the landlord relied upon in making their decision, and/or (2) provide evidence of mitigating circumstances.

Here's what to do you if you'd like to dispute information or request reconsideration after receiving a notice that your rental application has been denied:

Step 1: Within 48 hours of receiving a statement of rejection, provide the prospective landlord written, electronic, or verbal notice of your intent to dispute information or request reconsideration of the denial.

- For a sample notice of intent to dispute information or request reconsideration, see page 9.

Step 2: Within seven business days of receiving a statement of rejection, provide evidence of incorrect information or mitigating circumstances to the prospective landlord.

- Disputing Information: You can provide evidence that information relied upon by the prospective landlord was (1) inaccurate, or (2) incorrectly attributed to you, the prospective tenant, or (3) was based on screening criteria prohibited by Section 9-810.
- Evidence of Mitigating Circumstances: You can also provide evidence of mitigating circumstances--related to the reasons your application was denied--to show that you are able to satisfy the obligations of tenancy. Some examples of this type of evidence includes, but is not limited to:
 - a history of on-time rental payments that otherwise may not appear in a background check;
 - proof that a prior eviction based on nonpayment of rent was based, in whole or in part, on rent you did not personally owe;
 - new or increased income that is reliable and sufficient to cover rental costs;
 - letters of recommendation provided by employers or former housing providers;
 - changes in circumstances that would make prior lease violations less likely to reoccur.

? FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS FROM LANDLORDS

How do I get information on a tenant's background?

Landlords can request documentation from tenants in accordance with their uniform screening criteria. Landlords also often charge application fees and utilize tenant screening companies to obtain information on an applicant. Screening companies can provide you with reports based solely on the type of information you are looking to review. This information should align with your uniform screening criteria.

Can I still utilize a rental reference?

Yes, landlords may still request a rental reference from an applicant and use that information in your applicant screening process, so long as the screening process is compliant with Sec. 9-810. The landlord should document how a rental reference will be used and what information may result in an application being denied.

Can I still use credit scores?

A landlord cannot disqualify an applicant based solely on the credit score itself. A landlord can use relevant information from the credit report that is related to an applicant's rental history, and can consider a credit score as part of a holistic screening process.

How do I legally deny an applicant?

If a landlord denies a rental housing application, they must provide the applicant with a written notice of denial within 3 business days of the rejection. The notice must include the basis for the disqualification.

Can I request an applicant have a cosigner or guarantee?

Yes. A cosigner or guarantee is usually requested when an applicant does not meet the screening requirement on their own. You can continue to utilize this option in these instances.

Do I have to hold a unit while a rejected applicant disputes information or seeks reconsideration?

No, the landlord does not have to hold a unit if a rejected applicant disputes information or seeks reconsideration. However, if a rejected applicant provides new information that would prove to a reasonable person that they can meet the requirements of tenancy, a landlord with five or more rental units in the City of Philadelphia must offer the rejected applicant their next available unit of comparable size and rental price.

Is a rejected applicant who successfully disputes information or seeks reconsideration of denial required to accept the offer of a landlord's next available unit?

No, the rejected applicant is under no obligation to accept the landlord's next available unit.
